VIADUCT OPEN FOR TRAFFIC

First Team Crosses New Bridge at Twenty-Fourth Street.

ALL COMPLETE BUT PART OF RAILING

Day Traffic Over New Steel Structure Has Begun and Saturday Night Teams May Cross by Moon or Gaslight.

At 7 yesterday morning early risers in the vicinity of the new Twenty-fourth street viaduct witnessed the first traffic over the new structure, when a wagonload of brick came across the thousand feet of bridge and proceeded down the north approach to the Hickory street end. This was the first vehicle to cross the new viaduct in connection with public travel. Since that hour traffic has been continuous.

At last Tuesday's meeting of the council the two railroads which are building the viaduct, the Union Pacific and the Burlington, asked for a month's more time in which to complete the work. November 1 was the date previously agreed upon for completion and the council gave the railroads what they asked, extending the time to December 1.

Nevertheless the first wagon crossed the bridge on the first morning of November and there will be no blocking of daylight traffic from now on, not even temporarily. It will not be until Saturday night that night travel across the viaduct will be allowed, but commencing at that time traffic will not be restricted.

Delay in securing the side railing was the cause for the latest extension of time. The Burlington, which is building only about 200 feet of the viaduct at the east end, had the necessary material on hand, and its railing was completed several days since. With the remainder of the bridge, however, some difficulty was experienced. It was seen that all the railing could not be got in place by this morning, so the extra month was allowed.

Most of the guard rail is up now, however, and a wooden substitute protects the open space, so day travel is safe enough. By Saturday night all steel railing will be in and the viaduct will be open night and day from then on.

WILL MOVE TICKET OFFICE

Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Takes One of Most Prominent Corners in Town.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul will remove its ticket office to the Paxton block, the corner now occupied by A. Mandelberg as a jewelry store, as soon as the latter disposes of his stock. P. A. Nash, general western agent of the road, said yesterday that the Milwaukee had been negotiating for the corner at various times during the last five or six years, but as yet no lease had been made. Mr. Mandelberg said that his lease expired October 1 and while he was willing to renew at the same figure, the railroad company had offered a higher rental than he cared to pay. He would not say when he proposed to give possession.

COME RIGHT IN, MR. CROWE

Police Have Done All Within Their Power to Meet Your Terms.

The last day of the time allotted by Pat Crowe to the authorities in which to comply with his terms of surrender has passed. His conditions have not been met and he has not surrendered and the matter stands virtually where it did a week after the abduction of young Cudahy. "Crowe, in one of his letters to the chief, gave the authorities until November 1 in which to guarantee him a $500 bond," said a city detective, "and this they failed to do, though the only hitch to that end was the stand taken by Judge Vinsonhale, who declined to say what he would do with a prisoner until he had the prisoner before him and heard the evidence. This was a mere technicality, however, and Crowe shows his bad faith when he permits it to be so."

Tim Ormsby

"I see by th' downtown papers," said Tim Ormsby, "that th' machine is goin' to move th' pethouse down to Sixteenth and Farnam street, an' condemn Jefferson square for a city dump."
"That would be a very unpopular step," said the desk sergeant. "Why, the people would rise in their might and vote it out of existence."
"Yes, an' this place goes on to say that th' machine is strongly suspected of sendin' a box o' poisoned candy to Miss Ellen Stone, 'cause she ain't been heard from for some time, an' that th' Walnut Hill frog was th' machine's hired man. An' that ain't no Hallowe'en joke, it says."
"Does it say anything about th' machine kidnappin' Eddie Cudahy?"
"This paper don't. It's th' other downtown sheet that says that."
"I knew it!" exclaimed the sergeant. "I know those reporters would get onto that! What's the evidence?"
"Well, it says that when the council tore down the rewards for Crowe it tipped its hand, that anyone can see the rewards was a bluff and that they ain't no such man

BLOCKS PARK SCHEME AGAIN

Proceedings for Condemnation of Bluff Tract District Illegal.

LEGAL DEPARTMENT ADVISES NEW DEAL

Description of Property Erroneously Stated in Ordinance and Mayor Appoints Appraisers Too Soon—New Proceedings Necessary.

The scheme of the park commissioners and many citizens to boulevard the strip of land at the east end of the exposition grounds known as the "bluff tract district" has again fallen through. The commissioners were yesterday notified by the city legal department that the latest proceedings by ordinance looking to this end were illegal, and that the entire matter was therefore set back to its beginning.

This marks the close of the second chapter of a struggle which the park commissioners have undergone in their efforts to bring this plan into practice. Assistant City Attorney Adams states two reasons for killing this latest attempt.

First, because the property is denoted in the formal description accompanying the condemnation ordinance as "tax lots." Mr. Adams says this description is in improper terms, that the tract should be delineated as "metes and bounds."

Second, because Mayor Moores appointed the appraisers to adjust and report the damages before he approved the ordinance providing for the condemnation, the agent of damage.

Mr. Adams maintains that either of these reasons alone is sufficient to nullify the ordinance, and therefore he calls everything off.

That merely means that the commissioners must now begin all over again and once more wade through the morass of petitions, reports, descriptions, condemnations, appraisals, appraisements and final assumption of the district by the city before the parking and boulevarding can be begun. But they are not disheartened and will begin again at once, hoping that no flaw or mistake will invalidate the next attempt.

PUSHING PAVING MEASURES

Council Holds Two Special Meetings to Hurry Improvements.

MAYOR APPROVES CONTRACTS AND BONDS

Everything Now in Readiness for Contractors to Begin Work on Harney and Twenty-Eighth Street and Lafayette Avenue.

At two successive special meetings of the city council yesterday morning the last link was added to the chain of repaving preliminaries which the councilmen have been straining every nerve to get ready in time for the completion of all the work this year.

As a result of these two meetings the contract and bond for the repaving of Twenty-eighth street between Farnam and Leavenworth streets have been approved by the council and are now in the hands of the mayor for his sanction, so that this district will be ready and waiting for the pavers by the time they get to it. The Grant Paving company secured the contract.

The other action in paving matters was the final passage of the ordinance providing for the repaving with asphalt of Lafayette avenue from Fortieth to Forty-second streets. Both this and the Twenty-eighth street district ordinance were placed in the call for the first meeting, that at 10 o'clock, and both were passed on third reading by unanimous vote of the five members present.

Yesterday afternoon the mayor signed the contracts and bonds for both the Twenty-eighth street district and the Harney street section, so that repaving those streets may begin next Monday.

WANT COURT ORDER VACATED

Depositors of Defunct German Savings Bank Protest Against Compromise.

A large number of the depositors of the defunct German Savings Bank, including many women, met in the New York life building last night and discussed the legal proceedings now under way to compel the stockholders to make good the claims in full. This action arose from a recent order of the court allowing the stockholders to pay an amount sufficient to give the depositors 50 per cent of the balance due them in full payment of their claims. The depositors want this order vacated and it was the unanimous opinion among them that the matter should be vigorously fought.
