TALE OF AN ALARM BELL

Owner of a Store Forgets to Lock the Door and Pays a Messenger Bill.

Officer Cook, white walking his Douglas reet beat Sunday night, found the front door of the Lilliputian Bazaar unlocked. All was dark inside mave a faint circle of yel ow light about a kerosene lamp turner in a back room. He stepped in and closed the door softly just as the clock on the federal building struck 11:30.

The officer thought a burglary was in progress and that the glimmer in the back com was the light of a dark lantern re flected from the burntshed door of a safe He drew his revolver and tiproed down the aisle between the counters. the acquisition by the city of a market site his foot struck a string that had been and a market house. > So he remained crouching in the shelter of the counter.

The hell upstairs continued to ring. Five minutes passed. Still the bell rang. The officer's legs were beginning to get stiff, as his position was cramped. He pictured to himself an indignant proprietor leaning over the balustrade at the upper landing with a buildog pistol trained on the store room, waiting for something to back room.

The bell upstairs was clanging away as

Then an idea struck the officer. Beating his club upon the floor, he made the store ultimate success being now assured, the vocal with his shouts. There was no response.

A half hour later a messenger boy was placed in charge of the store and another messenger boy was sent out to the home o the proprietor, thirty blocks away, to notify Of the two known schemes for securing him that something was wrong. He had The bell was still ringing when at 12:30 he arrived to break the connection.
