Mr. Richardson briefly thanked the caucus for the honor done him and said:

Two years ago our friends of the Fifty-sixth congress nominated me in caucus to receive their votes for speaker of the house. I accepted and entered upon the duties im-posed upon me by their action with what I then felt was the fullest appreciation of the responsibilities thereby imposed. Now, etame distinction is again bestowed upon me by this caucus. I assure you I appreciate the honor done me at this time more beenly and profoundly. If possible, than before, because I can look at it as some-thing of an endorsement of my efforts, though they may have been feeble to serve the party in the position which they placed me, and now I realize more than I did then the responsibilities you have com-mitted to me. My best efforts shall be put forth to have the minority on the floor of the house acquit itself in such manner as to command the respect and confidence not only of our own party, but of the country at large. Two years ago our friends of the Fifty duced:

Asks for Co-Operation.

Asks for Co-Operation. I ask, and have the right to ask, of each of you the fullest and heartlest co-opera-tion and support at all times, and I am sure I will have it, for in no other way can I hope for success. I shall not attempt here and now to discuss or lay down any prin-ciples by which we are to be governed as a party. It would not be appropriate for me to do so. There is one thing, however, that I will say now at the very beginning of our service, because I believe it is proper that it should be said. It is this: I urge upon you and each of you the surgasing importance of attending the sessions of the house. We have a minority consisting of about 160 members. If every member of this opposition will attend our sessions and enswer when his name is called we will make our opposition effective and often-times will be able to defeat our opponents in their efforts to pass unwise and im-proper measures. By Mr. Burleson of Texas: Resolved, That every representative in congress participating in this caucus shall be governed by the action of said caucus where same does not conflict with the dec-laration of principles and policies set forth in the last platform adopted by the demo-oratic party in national convention assem-bled.

Mr. Hepburn contended that the present rules gave the speaker entirely too much power and in the course of his remarks made the point that there was nothing in the constitution which required that the presiding officer chosen by the house should be a member of that body.

Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania replied at considerable length to Mr. Hepburn's argument, contending that the present rules were an evolution and had worked so admirably in facilitating the transaction of business that the democrats, despite their outery against them during the Fifty-first congress, had not dared to materially modify them when they came back into power in the Fifty-second congress. He took occasion to score Mr. Hepburn for harping on the subject of the rules, saying sarcastically that he had enjoyed the peech of the Iowan quite as much today he had on former occasions.

Hepburn and Daizell Debate.

This roused Mr. Hepburn and he reorted that if he (Mr. Hepburn) could hange his position with the same facility hat the gentleman from Pennsylvania could he would probably be able to get more new matter into his speeches. The discussion lasted about two hours. Mr. Shattue of Ohio supported the Dalzell resolution. Mr. Grow of Penneylvania, though generally in favor of the old rules, desired modification which would take away from he chairmen of committees the power of controlling time on measures before the house. When Mr. Hepburn's motion was put it was defeated by an overwhelming vote-about 3 to 1. He then offered in succession as distinct amendments the four modifications of the rules which he had suggested in his argument. These were in turn voted down. The highest vote which any of them received was forty-one. No question of policy was broached at the
