

Drunkards Early Cured.

Miss Edith Williams Wants Every Lady Reader of this Paper to Know How She Saved Her Father.

Used an Odorless and Tasteless Remedy in His Food Quickly Curing Without His Knowledge.

Total Package of the Remedy is mailed Free to Show How Easy it is to Cure Drunkards.

Nothing could be more dramatic or more wonderful than the manner in which Miss Edith Williams, 229 E. 22nd St., saved her father from a life of misery, wretchedness and almost unbearable suffering.

MISS EDITH WILLIAMS. "Yes, father is a reformed man," she said, "and our friends think it a miracle that I cured him without his knowledge or consent. I had read how Mrs. Kate Lynch of 229 E. 22nd St., Fremont, Mo., had cured her husband by using a remedy secretly in his coffee and food, and I wrote to Dr. Halnes for a trial. When it came I put some in father's coffee and food and watched him closely, but he couldn't feel the difference, so I kept it up.

"One morning father got up and said he was hungry. This was the first time he rarely ate much breakfast. He went away and when he came back he was perfectly sober. I was almost frantic with joy as I hadn't seen him sober for half a day before in over fourteen years. After dinner he sat down in the big easy chair and said, 'Edith, I don't know what has come over me, but I hate the sight and smell of liquor and am going to stop drinking forever.' This was too much for me, and I told him then what I had done. Well, we both had a good cry, and now we have the happiest home and the kindest father you can imagine. I am so glad you will publish this experience, for it will reach many others and let them know about this wonderful Golden Specific.

Dr. Halnes, the discoverer, will send a sample of this grand remedy free to all who will write for it. Enough of the remedy is mailed free to show how it is used in tea, coffee or food, and that it will cure the dreaded habit quietly and permanently. Send your name and address to Dr. J. W. Halnes, 282 Glenn Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, and he will mail a free sample of the remedy to you, delivered sealed in a plain wrapper, also full directions how to use it. Books and testimonials from hundreds who have been cured, and everything needed to aid you in saving those near and dear to you from a life of degradation and ultimate poverty and disgrace.

Send for a free trial today. It will brighten the rest of your life.

HOPE FOR CLOTHING JOBBERS

Opinions as to Success Vary Among the Different Local Firms.

STRONG REASONS GIVEN FOR ENTERPRISE

Well-Posted Men Say It Would Pay. White Others Are Equally Certain There is No Chance for It.

Considerable interest is manifest in the discussion of a house in Omaha to engage in the wholesale clothing trade. The opinions expressed are divergent as to the feasibility of the enterprise, but all persons are agreed upon its desirability from the standpoint of the Omaha jobber in other lines.

C. A. Robinson of the Byrne-Hammer Dry Goods company said: "On the part of the general merchants who visit Omaha there is a great demand for a wholesale clothing house. Every man who visits Omaha has to go farther east to examine stocks in this line and place orders, and much complaint is heard over this condition of affairs.

"I have given the matter some attention and have come to the conclusion that there are just two plans upon which the business can be successfully operated. The day of the old-fashioned clothing house is past. The styles change so rapidly that no man can afford to pile goods upon the shelves. He must either manufacture his line or do a distinct jobbing business, which is distinguished from the regular wholesale business in that orders are taken at the local house and deliveries made direct from the factory, while the local house carries only such goods as are required to sort up broken stocks to rush orders. To conduct the latter business successfully would require between $75,000 and $100,000, as the jobber will have to carry the accounts of his customers and transact his business with the manufacturer on practically a cash basis if he is to realize the profits which should accrue. He would have to make arrangements to handle the product of one factory in full lines. Such a business, started with practically no capital, has been a gratifying success in St. Joseph, Mo., while a man who was firmly established in the wholesale trade for many years in that city has stock and kept it on his shelves before it was sold.

Factory Another Proposition. "The manufacturing enterprise is a different affair. While it can, no doubt, be established in Omaha it will require a large amount of capital—$750,000 or more—to compete with houses already established. Then provision would have to be made for operatives, and labor has had to get the worst of it in this city. The manager of the manufacturing department of the firm, said: "We have found the labor question the hardest one to solve in our business. When we came here we started fifty machines and now have 150 in operation, but never have as many operators as the other cities. While many are contented with the wages they receive in the apprenticeship, and leave for other occupations before they have qualified themselves to receive wages which are paid to experienced persons. I expect a clothing manufacturing house would have the same trouble unless they imported their workers.

Ward Burgess of M. E. Smith & Co., said: "There is an urgent demand from all of our customers for a wholesale clothing house in Omaha, and we would be pleased to see one established. There is no doubt that such a house could be made to pay, but as to the details I know little.

No Middleman.

Morris Levy of the Nebraska Clothing company, said: "While I do not want to throw cold water upon any enterprise coming to Omaha, I really do not see how such a house could be made to pay. In the first place the retailer buys almost direct from the manufacturer. This is true, not only of the houses in the larger towns, but of the country. In the larger cities of the country there are small manufacturers who do not make sufficient goods in a year to supply a large retail establishment, and they seek for customers among the smaller stores. The manufacture of clothing is different from that of other lines. While many of the factories have passed into the hands of large corporations, this is impossible in the manufacture of clothing. Any man who knows the business and is in a position to hire assistants, can start a factory by buying a half of cloth and cutting it up. He may not be able to sell to large establishments, and the large houses are forced to buy from the big factories in order to get the quantities desired, but he can make his goods cheaper than the large factories, and can sell at closer margins. As a rule he can make only the cheaper grades of clothing, but this grade is the one which is sold offener than others.

"With this condition existing in all of the larger cities, notably Boston, Chicago and particularly New York, there is little room for the jobber. Omaha can do as well as any other place, I believe, but I am not sanguine upon the subject."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The Demosthenian Debating society held a short business meeting Monday afternoon after drill. Messrs. Werham, Keller, Smith and Arnold will compete for the interschool debate, to be held at Lincoln on New Year's. A preliminary debate will be held next week.

The "Jolly Ten" met at the home of Miss Margaret Caldwell last Saturday. The afternoon was enjoyably spent in games and later refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held Saturday, December 14, at the home of Miss Luella Heine.

It seems to be impossible for the new high school to be ready for use by January 1, but it is hoped that all the science departments will be completed enough for the pupils to work in.

Some of the advanced classes will receive their third unit's card next week. The reorganization of the Natural History society has been postponed until the first of the year, when it is hoped the new building will be ready for occupancy. It was thought best to postpone the reorganization on account of so many biology students coming at 9 o'clock and the others at 10:30. When the new building is occupied all will come at 9 o'clock.

Nearly all the seniors attended an important meeting of their class Friday afternoon. Mr. Waterhouse announced that the Board of Education had decided to change the regular plan of graduation. It was decided that the class have eight speakers from its own class, instead of engaging a lecturer. A very fair method of selecting the speakers has been decided upon. Orations and essays written voluntarily by the seniors will be examined by a faculty committee. The sixteen best ones will be selected. Exercises before graduation will be held to decide upon the right best of these sixteen. These eight will be delivered at commencement. A petition will be sent to the Board of Education for the permission of having the opening exercises in the new building. The money realized will go toward buying a statue for the new building and also for class day exercises. The senior class will be divided into two parts, as last year, for a literary contest. Miss Emma Shreiber will be leader of the

HEAVY TRADING ON BOARD

Great Enthusiasm Controls the Chicago Grain Pit.

RECORD PRICES FOR YEAR ARE TOPPED

Overwhelmed by the Rush of Orders from Every Side Brokers Bid Madly for Cereals.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—Speculation on the Board of Trade was on the rampage again today. Once more record prices in all grains were topped and bull enthusiasm ran from pit to pit, setting all trades in a fever of excitement. The conditions back of the upsurge were almost identical with those of the strong bull movement here Wednesday and Thursday. Although the visiting stockmen are rapidly leaving the city, many of them are still buying. Country orders deluged the commission houses this morning. Added to this big demand, however, was a new bull incentive, that of capitalistic speculation. Prominent brokers said that the country has gone speculation mad and that men who usually dabble in stocks are turning to grain.

Trade seemed almost to ignore the early natural conditions which usually turn market. However, the news today was bullish. Both the Liverpool and the English country markets were strong, the outside market for wheat and receipts rapidly falling. These factors, combined with the report that Wall street was strongly buying in this market, brought opening prices 5/16 cent higher for December wheat and 1/2 cent higher for May. Naturally these bulges brought heavy liquidation, but prices stood well and reactions brought them up against every bit of bullish news. December ranged between early 57 3/4 and 58 1/2 cents.

Corn and oats, though both excellent records for many years, followed largely after the lead of wheat. The cash situation in both these cereals was very strong and the supply markedly limited. December corn broke the record at the opening, 19 1/2 to 5 cents higher than yesterday at 65 1/2 to 65 3/4 cents. May corn opened 1/2 to 1 cent higher at 68 1/2 to 68 3/4 cents, assessed off to 68 3/4 cents on profit taking, but soon rallied again to 68 3/4 cents. May oats opened 1/2 to 1 cent higher at 46 to 46 1/2 cents and after breaking slightly turned very strong and sold up to 47 cents.

The small bar in grains after the strong early opening lasted only a short time. Overwhelmed by the rush of orders from every side brokers bid madly for cereals at new record prices. What was in most demand and at one time sold 39 3/4 cents yesterday's close, December wheat closed at its top price, 58 1/2 cents higher than yesterday at 78 1/2 cents. May wheat touched 81 cents and closed excited at a gain of 2 1/2 cents at 83 1/2 cents. December corn did not feel much of the reacting impetus, but closed strong 1/2 of a cent up at 64 1/2 cents. May corn set its new record price at 68 3/4 cents, but fell at the close, a gain of 1/4 cent over yesterday, wise felt the strain and jumped to 67 1/2 cents, closing 1/2 cent higher at 67 1/2 cents.

Mr. Romayne Simmons was a worthy accompanist of such an artist. Could more be said?

MUSIC

Nordica. That's all. The critic's work is over. But for the benefit of the people who were not at the concert given last night it might not be out of place to draw a few lessons from the performance, if such a commonplace word can be applied to such a remarkable demonstration of art. The voice is a mighty voice and behind it is a wonderful mind. Such diminutives—such vibrant, intense and distinct phrasing—such a keenly responsive to the most delicate thread of art concealing the art. A model of which America may be proud and to which all American singers should bring all their best efforts to imitate. There is no artificiality about Nordica's tone-production. Mark you, no smiling to the right, placing in the nose, vibration over the face; no such absurdities. Imagine one asking Nordica what method she uses!

Her singing to the apotheosis of natural and artistic expression. She raises and expands her chest to the fullest, but never her shoulders. This is a lesson to the many singers who believe they must secure a big tone by becoming temporarily a hunchback. As an exponent of deep breathing applied to singing her visit was worth the price of many lessons to the vocal student. And there were scores of them present. Her facial expression is always of the most natural, adapted always to the sentiment and emotion of the song.

The all too brief study in recitative presented in connection with the Handel aria—the words, "Oh, worse than death, indeed, lead me, ye guards, lead me to the stake or to the flames, I'll thank your gracious mercy"—was an inspiration. What a dignity and poise, and what a rebuke to those who think that recitative means always and at all times a strident "declamando!"

The presentation of the Strauss song and that tremendous aria of Erkel, the Hungarian, were especially gratifying to the hungry music-lovers who know how to love such music. The "Maid of Cadix," magnificently sung, was particularly well received by the audience, as was Grieg's "Ich Liebe Dich," which was instantly sung, and in such a manner as to lead one to think that Nordica herself shared the wish of the audience to hear it again.

In Elsa's dream scene one could not help picturing the scene by the banks of the Scheide, where Elsa sings of her vision, that vision of the knight in shining armor, so soon to be realized in the advent of Lohengrin. Even in the "Song of Thanksgiving," that wonderfully vivid portrait of Miss Allerton, one could not but think of Brunhilde as the words, "My love is a flaming sword," rang out. Yes, the artist conjured up to the mind, Sigmond, Siegfried, Wotan, Siegfried and the wonder sword "Nothing." One could see Siegfried leaping through the wall of fire to awake Brunhilde with his kiss and the words soared forth, "Thank God for you." It was a coincidence.

The music lingers in the memory. The artist's voice is still heard. May she soon return.

Not much can be said of its dramatic strength, but it is wholesome and delightful, humorous, and these are the chief requisites of a successful comedy nowadays. Last season Mr. Murphy scored such a triumph in the revival of one of Sol Smith Russell's former plays that he decided this year to try a new play, written along the same lines, with one of those easy-going, homespun and always admirable characters always assumed with such success by Mr. Russell, as its central figure. Paul Wiltach was chosen as the author and has succeeded in fitting Mr. Murphy with a play and part in which he can hardly fail to win the success that his conscientious and painstaking efforts as an actor merits. Many of Mr. Murphy's mannerisms reminds one of Mr. Russell, although he can hardly be accused of copying this distinguished actor, since he has always possessed the same marked individuality which has had much to do with his success as a star. Dorothy shared, always the same handsome and talented little actress, has a congenial role in the portrayal of which she adds to her reputation as an artist. The balance of the company are rather below the standard, while the production is quite in keeping with the requirements of the story. The engagement was for Saturday only.

Blocks Insurance Amalgamation. NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The high court of justice, chancery division, has declined to consent to the proposed transfer of life department of the Atlas Insurance company to the Phoenix and the latter company, says a dispatch to the Associated Press from London, the terms of the arrangement. The Atlas Insurance company, which has a capital of $1,000,000, is the policy of the Atlas. It is intimated that this combination may be a stumbling block in the way of the consummation of the Phoenix-Atlas amalgamation.
