power in the hands of the judiciary is a compliment to the appearance of the integrity, fairness and independence of judicial officers, but if they are put on a plane with other officials who are compelled to or who at least in many instances do use their appointing power to further their own interests, will they not sacrifice their standing as judges and defeat the very objects intended to be secured? Let us adhere to the traditions and history of the past; let the judge be supreme in his field, the legislator in his and the executive remain where the constitution placed him; let the three co-ordinate departments of the government be preserved intact; let neither trench upon the other, and our liberties will be preserved and our rights duly maintained.
