place, after twenty seconds of the second round, with a right to the jaw. Leo was a lightweight, George a welterweight. Harry Armstrong, a lightweight, was to have met, Angus, but did not appear, so the boy consented to take on Miller rather than have the bout fall through.

Allison Morgan then won a tame battle royal from five other colored men, most of whom fell down when Allison approached. The next event was an uppercut knockout on the jaw which Danny Haley administered to Paul Murray, colored, after one minute and thirty-five seconds of the first round. Murray was considerably lighter. He rushed things, and soon bit the rosin. A benefit to Oscar Gardner in Washington hall on March 7 was announced, with three four-round mills between fighters wintering in Omaha and South Omaha, and wrestling matches besides. For March 21 a match has finally been arranged between Frank Collier of Wheeling, W. Va., and Billy Rhodes of the Pacific coast, welterweights.

In the main event Fred Summers, Spike Leroy, Charles Moore and Peter Rooney handled Smith, while behind Gardner were Danny Haley, Willy Haley, Frank Collier, Oscar Gardner and Dick O'Keefe. S. S. Smiley was chief timekeeper and handled the gong.

Her perturbation was great, but in a minute or two she recovered her composure. "In that case," she asserted, "I shall have the will tattoned just beneath the shoulder blade, and the notary and witnesses shall be women. Thank heaven that women have invaded some departments of the business world."

From this decision it was impossible to move her. She wanted all, and she lacked confidence in him. She knew that it was human nature to dialike to pay for goods that have been a long time in one s posses sion, and she feared that with the passing 1.000 years he might try to scale down the price. So she secured the tattoord will-a will that could not be destroyed, changed, lost of taken from her-and the only thing that seriously disturbed har during the operation 9.700 was the question of the notarial seal. Eara 1,350 suggested that a large seal that could make 8,500 a propar impression upon her should be specially made, but she repaid him for that later.
