Amusements

During a month of theatrical dreariness, after which time the greater majority of local lovers of the drama have sought entertainment elsewhere than the playhouse, the monotony was at least temporarily relieved by the appearance of the latter part of the last week of the popular English actor, Mr. E. S. Willard.

The close attention Mr. Willard gives to minute detail, the ability he exhibits in strengthening the weaker scenes, making them almost equally as interesting to the spectator as the stronger ones, and the possession of intensity combined with an utter lack of distracting mannerisms are among the characteristics that impress the auditor and place Mr. Willard in an absolutely unassailable artistic position.

The balance of the week at the legitimate theater was given over to a juvenile opera company from Australia, which is just now making a tour of this country.

After seeing E. S. Willard in the role of Prof. Goodville or David Garrick it would be hard for one to believe that he made his debut and his first success as an actor in the role of a heavy villain.

Coming Events. Al H. Wilson will be seen at the Boyd this afternoon and tonight in the comedy drama, "The Watch on the Rhine."

"Hunting for Hawkins," said to be a meritorious comedy on lines between the satirical humor of Hoyt and the quiet humor of Broadhurst, will be seen at the Boyd for four performances, starting Wednesday afternoon.

Every now and then some person protests against some unusually trashy thing that is paraded in the name of art, of literature, of music, of the drama.

have manifestly striven to verify the sentences judgment pronounced upon them by the premier of fakirs. As an illustration: Only a few years ago, when moderately invisible thousands of Omaha citizens journeyed to the old fair grounds on a Sunday afternoon to see a flying machine exhibition.

All of which leads up to the question, Who is to blame? It is difficult to fix the responsibility. Much of it must be assumed by the people, for if they did not give cheerfully in support of the theater of amusement, it would not have been the sordid consideration of dollars and cents, and while the managers may be ever so ardent in their individual advocacy of the better things, they are also liable to the operation of the prime mover after all.

those who have come are several who enjoy much popularity. Prominent among the new ones are the three Merrills, noted among cyclists for daring and cleverness.

Kubelik has come and gone. His management was well received in Omaha and Mr. Frohman will probably be a bona genus here.

My allusion to Yaze is merely a reminder, and those who are in the habit of maintaining what might be termed the "exclusive gush," it is unnecessary to forget the gorgeous sunset because we see a beautiful moonlight scene.
