Captain Hayes Resurrects Man Who Buried

Himself Alive, SCIENCE FAILS TO INTEREST POLICE

City Prosecutor Thomas in Quandary as to Charge Upon Which Hypnotist and His Assistants May Be Prosecuted.

eptain Hayes of the police force has performed his second resurrection and as a consequence Alonzo Goodal, who was buried alive yesterday morning "in the interest of science," is now in the city jail waiting for City Prosecutor Thomas to find out on what charge he can prosecute. In the jail with Goodal are W. H. Coleman, who dug the grave and made the pine box that contained the sleeper, and Willis Lehman and Paul

Quint, who managed the wake. Goodal claims to be a hypnotist and for the last five years has spent most of his time studying the subject, throwing himself into an unconscious state and posing for the benefit of morbid people in the show windows of the stores of country towns. Recently he became ambitious to emulate Atheno and decided to add to his accomplishments the art of sleeping under th

His first attempt was made yesterday and he gave his friends instructions to dig him up in four hours. The grave was dug on the Union Pacific grounds near Tenth and Nicholas streets, and after making the usual passes and going into a cataleptic state, Goodal was lowered to his resting place at 7:30 o'clock in the presence of a large crowd of spectators.

Police Officers Interfere.

Before the dull thud of the clods on the rough pine box had ceased to reverberate escape the officers caught him and placed walks. him in the patrol wagon.

The grave in which Goodal had buried himself was five feet six inches deep and no one remembers when it was enforced. the box was about two feet and a half wide There are places in Omaha, in the center and three feet deep. Protruding from the of the city, where unprotected banks of ground over the sleeper's face was a wooden clay tower high above the sidewalks and chute several inches square, over the top whenever there is a rain the walks are of which was no covering. Through the chute Goodal was enabled to get sufficient banks, while from time to time landslides air to sustain him and also a quantity of firt, which almost covered his face.

Goodal is a Shoemaker.

Goodal is a member of the Shoemakers' union and told the officers that he formerly clerked for Hayden Bros. Quint and Lehman are also shoemakers and neither seems to regret that he drove pegs in Goodals coffin. Coleman is about 65 years of age and received $1.25 for digging the grave and making the box. At the jail he was endeavoring to make a trade with Goodal to fill up the grave for another 50 cents. Goodal said the burial was done in the interest of science and that he chose his resting place out of the way of the busy world would be tried.

SIDEWALK INSPECTORS BUSY Board of Public Works Endeavoring to Secure Repairs to Defective Walks.

The Board of Public Works has declared war on defective sidewalks and two men are now at work inspecting all board walks in the city. Inspector Morris, whose usual duty is the inspection of permanent walks in course of construction, has been detailed to assist the regular inspector of a course which will take him to the northern part of the city next week.

The inspectors report a large number of walks in the southwestern part of the city through the shantles in the neighborhood in dangerous condition, as few repairs of the grave Officer Ryan telephoned to the have been made for a year or more, and station of the doings on his beat. Special Election on Proposition to Increase Capital Stock to Five > Hundred Thousand Dollars in Progress.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Omaha Auditorium company yesterday afternoon the building and grounds committee reported upon the result of a meeting held Monday evening with W. H. Mc-Cord, at which Mr. McCord desired the committee to report upon a plan of building at variance with the plans now prepared. Mr. McCord desired to have a onestory structure and fitted more especially for horse shows and fine stock exhibitions. The result of the report was the adoption of a resolution, offered by J. R. Lehmer, to the effect that the present plans, having been carefully considered and approved not only by the members of the board of directors, but also by the advisory committee, would not be radically changed. It was decided not to erect a temporary building for the accommodation of the fall Musical festival and the Christian church convention, as such a building would cost equipped, about $10,000.
