Woman's Work in Club and Charity

The many who have been speculating as to the position of Mrs. Robert Burdette on the color question, since the announcement that it was upon her advice that the Clubhouse Federation had adopted the bi-racial organization, may draw their own conclusions from the following, which appears in the April Club Woman:

While traveling in the south she met Bishop Grant, a leader of the African race, recently summoned to the White House, it may be mentioned to confer with the president, and she asked him the question: "Can the white club women better serve the women of your race by bringing them into their organization?"

The bishop answered: "Madam, as it always better the lower to associate with the higher, it would certainly help our colored women to come into the association of white women, but the question is, do white women have to decide as how they can best serve womanhood at large. Can they best do this by turning their backs on the southern white women, who need the national organization in their development, and extend the hand to the colored woman or by holding on to the southern white woman and continuing to help as in the past, the colored woman?"

This is the story that Mrs. Burdette tells when asked her views on the color question.

ENDURANCE AT THE PIANO

Gardner Plays at Keyboard Till Hands Grow Purple and Brains is Threatened.

Copyright, 1901, by Press Publishing Co. HERLIN, April 5.—New York World (Special Telegram).—The extraordinary piano player, Gardner, made in Munich this week an attempt to break his own world's record for endurance, twenty-seven hours and four minutes. Monday night at 5 o'clock he began to play and pounded away for twenty-seven hours with only one break of thirty minutes. Toward midnight of Tuesday he had to be dragged away from the piano by force, as the attendant feared he would develop paralysis of the brain. Gardner's hands became purple.

The most remarkable thing about the performance is that it did not seem to have had any injurious effects on the other complicated organs.

An Appeal to the Public.

Owing to the unfortunate financial difficulties brought about by certain business transactions and being unable to meet all creditors' claims, we are forced to retire from business. The stockholders of the company have decided to sacrifice the entire high-grade shoe stock at whatever price it will bring.

Our spring arrivals from all leading manufacturers are of the same style and soap which have given us the reputation as leaders in footwear. We have made special arrangements to handle the crowds and see that every pair is fitted by scientific shoe-fitters. Come now if you want high-grade footwear at less than manufacturers' cost.
