fames Dalhman Confident Smyth Will Be Nominated for Governor and that the Populists' Will Endorse Him.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, May 18 .- (Special.; -The semiannual apportionment of funds for the public schools of Nebraska will be divided among the various counties on a basis of $1.10 for each person of school age. amount to be divided is approximately $417,~ 500, while the school population is 377,000 This apportionment is the largest, with one exception, ever made in this state. A week ago the authorities estimated that the fund would be of sufficient size to give about $1 for each person of school age, but late returns from the county treasurers exceeded the most sanguine expectations and brought the total up to over $40,000 greater than estimated.

The largest fund ever apportioned in May gave about $1.20 for each person of school age. That was in 1898, when the fusion reformers strained every effort to collect back interest and back taxes, but in the following year the apportionment fell off over $100,000, the total being only $332,- Dahlman Picks Smyth as Winner.

James C. Dahlman, democratic national committeeman tor Nebraska, was in Lincoln today conferring with political brethren regarding the prospects for the party at the forthcoming fusion conventions, which will be held in Grand Island on June 24.

"I am confident that a democrat will be nominated for governor," said Mr. Dahlman. "The indications are that the offices will be divided between the two parties, so that if the democrats take the head of the ticket the remainder will go to the populists. I have traveled over a major portion of the state and have talked with many men of our party and feel safe in predicting the nomination of C. J. Smyth for the governorship. Will the populists endorse him? I feel that they would be more inclined to endorse him than any ather democrat. I am confident Mr. Bryan would not accept the nomination were it tendered to him.

'If the democrats can't land the office l look for the nomination of either R. D. Sutherland or W. L. Stark. Both are active in the campaign and the populists will undoubtedly rally to the support of one of

Watkins Eulogizes Morton.

Albert Watkins addressed the students of the University of Nebraska this morning on the "Distinguishing Characteristics of J. Sterling Morton." He referred to Mr. Morton as the Joel Chandler Harris of the northwest, knowing all the folklore of the region. The salient feature of his life was the appreciating and holding out of ideals. "Frank R. Stockton, Sol Smith Russell, J. Sterling Morton, Amos J. Cummings, Potter Palmer, Archbishop Corrigan, Bret Harte and Admiral Sampson constitute a list that the world cannot lose without painfully missing," declared Mr. Watkins,

"The source of Morton's strength and influence consisted in all animating individuality, powerful egoism and his fighting powers for what he thought was right.' Continuing Mr. Watkins said in part:

'Morton was not a paragon and he would have resented an imputation of saintship. He was of the earth, very, but very broadly human-tempted like as we are. This is why he could be a mentor and a powerful exemplar for human people. It is a common, but shallow, observation that he always advocated whatever he thought was right. This is misleading and confusing. for he was a successful man and the two propositions are contradictory. Success ad particularly his considerable business success, demanded a degree of prudence. Prudence is the floor walker for expediency. It a. rests abstract justice and requires or accepit the surrender of ideals which a complex society agrees are impracticable. High imaginings alone will not feed and clothe a concrete family, much less surround them with things of beauty, and Mr. Morton did all this, but he was an uncompromising fighter for positions he assumed and for principles he espoused. As the world loves a fighter, especially a fighter of skill and prowess, he gained great prestige.

"He was a reservoir of folklore-the Joel Chandler Harris of the northwest, with all his impressionability, his sentiment, his humor and more than his wit. It is a sad loss to Nebraska, in particular that this perennial fountain of great precepts hid in sweetness and pure pleasure, of pencilled beauty where our duller sight sees naught but shapes uncouth, could have been preserved.

Library Opening May 27.

The new Carnegie library building Fourteenth and N streets will be formally opened to the public Tuesday afternoon, May 27. The program for the event will include speeches by several prominent citizens who are interested in library work. The building, with all its fixtures, including the sidewalk and iron fence, will cost $77,000. The original donation was $75,000, but the additional $2,000 was given a few weeks ago to pay for necessary indoor fixtures. The lot upon which the building stands was purchased with money donated by citizens in a general subscription. The library will include about 16,000 volumes when it is formally installed in its new quarters.

Treasurer Stuefer has issued a call for general fund warrants registered from 80,-774 to $1,530, aggregating about $100,000. Interest on the warrants will be stopped on June 5. This is the first call for over $50,000 made since last December. The receipts of the treasury have been heavy during the past two months, owing partially to the fact that the county treasurers throughout the state have returned large sums of money derived from taxation and other sources.

> Digests what you Dyspepsia Cure

The process of digestion is simply explained. In the mouth, food is masticated and mixed with saliva containing a digestant called ptyalin. In the stomach, it is acted upon by gastric juice containing peosin, which digests albuminous foods. In the intestines, pancreatin is added to digest fats and starches.

Indigestion always indicates an insufficient amount of one or all of these digestants. At first thought it seems proper to abstain from foods not easily digested; but reflection shows as that while this affords relief by giving the weakened organs less to do, it only makes them weaker by giving them less nourishment. If you suffer from indigestion, the only right thing to do is to eat a generous variety of food and digest it by using such a preparation as Kodol Dyspersia Cure, which contains all the known digestants, and completely digests what you eat. It can't help but do you good
