MILEAGE BUREAU FOR OMAHA

Office for Sale of New Script Books to Be Located Here.

NORTHWESTERN FAST TRAIN MAKES TRIP

Other Chicago-Omaha Lines Announce They Will Not Undertake to Meet Northwestern and Rock Island Cuts.

Twelve railroad systems of the transmissouri country have now adopted the interchangeable mileage scheme and the location of the general offices for the bureau has been secured for Omaha.

The script book system, planned by General Passenger Agents Francis of the Burlington, Lomax of the Union Pacific, Buchanan of the Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley and Nicholson of the Santa Fe, will be used and the books will be placed on sale July 1 at all offices of roads concerned.

The twelve main systems involved include about fifteen more proprietary lines. There are still some roads left in this territory that have not entered the arrangement.

General Passenger Agent Francis of the Burlington has just returned from Kansas City, where the meeting at which the scheme was adopted was held, and he is well pleased at the prospect.

The systems co-operating in the bureau are: Union Pacific, Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley, the Nebraska and Missouri lines of the Burlington, Kansas City & Omaha, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha; Denver & Rio Grande, Gulf, Kansas City Southern, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe; western lines of the St. Louis & San Francisco, Colorado & Southern, St. Joseph & Grand Island.

The one topic of general discussion on railroad row in the Chicago & Northwestern passenger train which left Union station here at 8 o'clock Sunday night and slowed into Chicago at 7 o'clock Monday morning.

As yet no other railroad has taken any steps to duplicate this schedule, nor even to equal that of the new Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific train, which also started Sunday and which does the journey in twelve hours and a half.

DISLIKE DILATORY TACTICS

District Judges Annoyed by Number of Continuances Requested.

GROUNDS COURT WORK IN HOT WEATHER

Judge Says Supreme Court Ought to Return to Former Plan of Taking Up Appealed Cases by Districts.

The dignity of their office forbids any show of temper, but the district judges don't hesitate to say that they dislike to see attorneys pursuing their present dilatory tactics.

"It is going to be too hot to try cases after the middle of June," said one of the judges yesterday morning. "and so for this term it was arranged that there be but six weeks jury work."

"Often the excuse for demanding the delay is that they have to be in supreme court at Lincoln, and I wish the higher court would return to its former plan of taking cases by districts. When that system was in practice the court disposed of all the cases of one district before taking up those of another, and in this way the attorneys of each district would be there for several consecutive days and then be through for some time."

"An Action for Possession. 'Yes, and sometimes those chaps go fishing or give their time to other matters that have nothing to do with courts, after we have continued the cases,' remarked another judge, with a dry smile."

"I did, judge," he answered with a serene smile, "and a mighty important case it was. 'What kind of an action was it?'"

"For possession," he answered. "I began it three years ago and have been pleading pretty nearly ever since. In fact I was in court, or rather in chancery, most of the time, and finally when I pressed for an answer to my original petition and got it, you surely couldn't blame me for dropping other suits to dispose of this one."

After the officers found that Heldt was not of age and that he did not have the consent of his parents to marry and the woman had stated that she would serve a term in the penitentiary before she would consent to herd cattle in Montana she was released and Heldt was locked up in order to prevent him from spending $11 which he had saved out of the wreck and to give him an opportunity to get over the effects of his touch of high living.

The First American Revolution

Arrival of Ulloa the Signal for Hostile Demonstrations.

CHAPTER II.

Ulloa arrived at New Orleans on March 5, 1766, with two companies of Spanish infantry, commanded by Pienras, and the superior council, influenced by Lafreniere, demanded that he exhibit the authority by which he claimed to take possession of the colony. In response to the demand the authority of the council, declared it was a mere municipal organization and asserted that he would deal only with L'Abbadie's successor, Governor Aubry, as the representative of the king of France.

It does Ulloa justice to say that he was wholly unfit to deal by the usual Spanish methods with the conditions of revolt he found in the colony. He was a man of gentle, a thinker, a philosopher and a scientist. Ulloa's own attitude was characteristic. He saw that the discontent was great and increasing and he refused to take formal command until reinforcements had been sent from Spain to enable him to maintain himself. He governed through Aubry, as commander of the French troops then in Louisiana, used them as a shield to support Ulloa and the treaty of cessation against the revolutionists.

Orleans while waiting to be expelled by the revolutionists. He was highly educated in navigation, but so eccentric and so devoted to study that when a commodore in the Spanish navy on the eve of the most important years of his life, he had become immersed in study and forgot to open the sealed orders on which the result of the expedition depended.

This was the man who, with two companies of infantry, had been sent to take possession of half a continent, and who had been the king's "very dear and well-beloved cousin, the king of Spain," at the same time the other half had been surrendered to his English enemies. The peaceable and eccentric Spanish scholar, with his corporal's guard of soldiers, found the English aggressive in the most unbecoming manner. In the Mississippi and in Louisiana itself he found a rebellious population which he suspected of corresponding with the English to secure their help in the event of the failure of the mission on which Milhet had been sent to the court of France. The English minister of the day did so on learning the situation was to temporize and postpone running up the Spanish flag at New Orleans, and he did it. Before fully learning what the situation was, however, he had carried out the policy of Spain in a way which forced the revolution to issue.

young man, "and proposed that we go to a restaurant and talk it over. While there he ordered a $10 dinner and when I asked her what she wanted to drink she called for a bottle of wine. That cost me $3. Then we took a walk around and stopped in at some wine room, where she kept calling for beer and I kept buying until I had spent $30. Then she told me to walk around and she would be back, and she didn't come. Now Mr. Polleman, wouldn't you think if a woman would drink with you that way that she ought to marry you?"

When the officer told him he knew of no law by which he could force Esther to marry him, he turned to leave, saying that with a wild flourish of arms he declared that he "would never marry no woman on earth."

ARGUE FOR FIRE CORONER

Members of Commercial Club Meet the Councilman in General Committee.

After the noon recess of the city council a board of education met in general committee for the purpose of considering the question of the appointment of a fire coroner. There were present on behalf of the Commercial club C. H. Picken, J. H. Dumont, Mr. Hochstetler and H. O. Beatty. Mr. Beatty represented the club as a board of education.

Members of the council expressed themselves as opposed to the plan, particularly Mr. Trostler, who said that if such a saving could be made by the appointment of the coroner the men who would save the money should be willing to pay the cost of the officer themselves and not throw it upon the city, which is now loaded down with officers.

WANTED TO GIVE HER A HOME

Plea of Man Who Attempted to Entice Little Girl to Kansas City.

C. J. Sharpling, charged with assaulting 12-year-old Lena Mungerson, was sentenced to sixty days in jail by Judge Berka yesterday morning. The little girl testified that Sharpling met her on the street and after she had refused to accompany him out of the city he caught her by the hand and tried to force her to consent to go with him. The girl said that he held her hand while walking a distance of half a block and refused to release her. Sharpling at the trial stated that he was an atheist and would not be sworn. He admitted that the girl's story was true in most parts, but that he walked with her and held her hand in order to protect her. "I wanted to give the girl a home," he said, "and I see nothing wrong in that." Judge Berka did.

Trip Was a Great One.

But the boys have come home from a great trip and that bears them up. "It was a success in every way," said Rouke. "We lost two games and had two taken away from us, but we were never out of the game until last Saturday. Then we were so bad we couldn't do a thing. That crowd there is fierce. It's runs or rotten eggs for the umpire down there and bricks and bats for the umpire. The Saturday fiasco was rank and those two 1 to 0 games should both have been about 4 to 6. We got the worst of it all through and never got a hit until last Saturday. Then we became too bad to stand longer. Duffy started it by hitting a fierce hot one near second base that looked as if it were going to hit night, but by a great play Stewart scooped it up and sent it to first. It got there just as Duffy started to slide. Cox said safe, but our boys never said a word. The next man up was struck out fair and square, but Cox said base on balls. Again we kept quiet. Then came a scratch two-bagger, scoring those two. Then came another strikeout that Cox said was a base on balls. Still we didn't kick. Then came another hit, which was a single. Then came Gaudin, but about five St. Joseph players had left the bench and were all over the third-base line, so Johnny could not get the ball. Cox had been waving the interlopers back to their benches while waiting for the ball to come in, but they didn't go, and afterward he couldn't remember anything about it."

"Despite the published reports to the contrary, the trip was a financial success. It was far better than my first trip last year."

"Just to show what kind of a hit the Omaha team is making throughout the country, let me tell you that Kansas City was approached by Bobby Quinn, manager of the Columbus American association team. He asked me if I would bring the

OMAHA WARRIORS AT HOME

Rourke's Cohorts Return Full of Enthusiasm and Base Hits.

SCARRED, CRIPPLED AND VICTORIOUS

Two Games Lost and Two Games Stolen Out of a Total of Fifteen Played on the Trip.

Charged with enthusiasm and filled with a determination to continue on the high road that leads to the championship "Papa Bill" Rourke and his victorious team of baseball players arrived in Omaha at 6:30 yesterday morning from St. Joseph after an absence of more than two weeks.

They are largely a bunch of cripples the Rourke Rangers were frantic for a chance at the weathersmen, who have defeated them so often on paper since the season opened and who have failed signally in their opportunity to make good all that's been said about them. With two infielders and an outfielder so badly mangled that they belong on the bench or in bed it takes a little nerve for Omaha to go into today's game with stout hearts, but that's just the way every man feels.

Thankfully will Bill Rourke welcome "Loaned" Stone does he appear on the horizon today in time to play for Frank Genies in its need of a substitute. Frank slid into a bag at Kansas City and strained his throwing shoulder woefully. He has been playing with it ever since and it has become inflamed and steadily worse, so that he cannot throw at all now. It will take a good week's lay-off to put him back to form and that's what he will get when Stone comes. Rourke wired Billy Hart yesterday to get him here without fail today, as the case is growing desperate.

"Calboun" is even worse off, though it is his underpinning that is affected. One leg is cut from hip almost to ankle and bruised black all the way down. The other is also very sore and lame. Thirubaseman Hickey is also answering the sick call with a bad slit seven inches long in one leg.
