

SPEAKS ON THE CIVIL WAR

Rev. C. N. Dawson at Memorial Services at Seward Street Church.

GRANT AND CROOK POSTS IN ATTENDANCE

Preacher Asks Veterans to Forget the Evils of the War if They Can and to Obliterate Sec-tional Feeling.

Memorial services at the Seward Street Methodist church yesterday morning were attended by U. S. Grant post and George Crook post, Grand Army of the Republic, and the Auxiliary Woman's Relief corps.

The church was fittingly decorated with palms, cut flowers, the Stars and Stripes being displayed at every available point.

Every seat in the house was occupied when Rev. C. N. Dawson, the pastor, opened the services. The speaker said that he had intended to preach a sermon, but had changed his mind and would speak on the subject of the civil war and the events leading up to it, speaking from personal reminiscences. He said in part:

"The reasons for the war are to be found in the settlement of the country. The men who started at Plymouth Rock had vastly different views from those who landed on the James. The former came to this country to secure a home for a glorious liberty, while the latter came only to make money. In the days immediately before the war the subject filled the churches. Sermons were preached on it in all parts of the country. It divided people in the church."

"On this Memorial day I do not think it wrong to go back in memory to those days, to the battles, to the hospital, and there are times when it is not wrong to almost worship the glorious flag. I am not here, men, brethren, friends, to stir up old animosities. I want to see the day when there will be no north, no south; when we will think only of one flag, for one flag is enough. I don't want to stir up sectional feeling, but when I hear the awful story of the prisons I am not surprised to know that some cannot forget. Many were starved to death there, and I can overlook the feeling. I believe the great God in heaven is merciful."

"But all of this is past. Let us forget the evils if we can. The events of the last two years have obliterated much."

"The trouble was not all in the south and the suffering was not all in battle—for here in the homes of the north, mothers and wives watched the mails, devoured the papers to see the fate of their loved ones in the battle."

"I have no sympathy with those who object to pensions. I want to see the day when each soldier will have a pension—enough to live upon."

"I remember when the war closed—how the bells rang. Those were joyous days for some, but sad days for many—those who waited for the men whose war records were summed up in the one word, 'missing'."

OPEN MISSION OF TWO WEEKS.

Fathers Rosswinkel and Denoher Begin Missionary Work.

St. Philomena's cathedral was crowded to the doors Sunday morning and many were unable to get in, on the occasion being the opening of a two weeks' mission to be conducted by Rev. J. Rosswinkel, S. J., and Rev. J. J. Denoher, S. J., the well-known missionaries.

The cathedral was tastefully decorated with flowers and presented a beautiful appearance. At 10:30 o'clock high mass was celebrated, after which Rev. Rosswinkel announced the work of the mission and announced the program. He stated that a mission was a message and that he and his co-workers were here to deliver a message to the people.

"We come not to deliver a message of our own," he said, "for we have no message to come representing the Lord of us all, to deliver His message. Primarily the message is for our own good Catholics, who are first in the church. We have made it for those who were with us but have now wandered away. We desire to bring back these wandering sheep and to do it we must have the co-operation of you all. You must assist us in getting these people back, help them to be saved. We also desire the presence of non-Catholics, good, respectable people. There are many members leaving the Catholic church, and many joining us, and if we work together we will have many more."

The first week will be for the women, and those who have non-Catholic husbands are invited to bring their husbands with them. The second week will be for the men. Following will be the order of the daily exercises: 8 a. m., mass and short instruction; 8 a. m., mass and sermon; 3 p. m., way of cross and children's mission; 7 p. m., instruction for adults, Catholic and non-Catholic; 7:45 p. m., beads, sermon and benediction.

TRUTH, HONOR AND INTEGRITY.

Rev. Van Deelen Names Some Objects of Human Effort.

At Trinity cathedral Sunday morning Rev. E. J. W. Van Deelen preached from the text, "To This End Was I Born." John xviii, 7. "It is urgent that we should struggle to discover our special vocation in life," said he, "in order that we may not squander our energies in abortive effort. How shall we know when we have found it? I believe that our special province, in nine cases out of ten, is the one in which we find ourselves. It does not follow that we are predestined to live certain lives and fill certain fields of activity. I believe that, on the contrary, we too often miss the end which God had in view for us."

"It is not so much what the work is as how it is done; it matters little to God where we move in. But there must be no wasting of our talents. We must have real, genuine ambition, and be faithful to that ambition. We must determine to get on in the world, using care, seal, stern, and watchful self-denial, ceaseless battling against human weaknesses, never-ending warfare against the lusts of the flesh, and so ever tend on to truth, honor and stainless integrity."

"And if the Master sees fit in His wisdom to disappoint some of our ambitions, let us not be disappointed. Let us say to ourselves, 'The Divine Master has placed me here to try me. He shall see that I am brave, patient, truthful, faithful and true.' And that your work is done in the light of day so that you need not blanch for them when you come to commune with your God in the quiet evening hour."
