FRENCH STATESMEN IN FIGHT

Blap Each Others Faces in the Chamber of Deputies.

ONE MEMBER CALLS PRESIDENT A THIEF

Calls Republicans Swindlers and Traitors-May Be Prosecuted for Insuiting Loubet in His Inflamed Speech.

PARIS, June 5 .- During a dispute in the Chamber of Deputies today, M. DeLargentaye, a reactionary deputy of the Cotes-Dupuy party, exclaimed: "Yes, you republicans are swindlers and traitors, and, in a way, foreigners.'

A number of republican deputies protested, whereupon the speaker replied: "And your president of the republic is a thief."

A scrimmage, during which fisticuffs were exchanged, ensued, half a dozen deputies, including the marquis de Dion, M. Millevoy and M. Meslier taking part in the fighting. The fight occurred in the room of the committee of the Chamber of Deputies which was engaged in the verification of the recent elections. The dispute which caused it arose over nationalist posters, in which the republicans were attacked in violent language. Several of the nationalist deputies today approved these expressions and in the row which followed the participants freely exchanged insults such Bishop Satterlee delivered the in vocation and Major Henderson then introduced the president, who spoke as follows: Speech of the President.

President and Ladies and Gentlemen Mr. President and Ladies and Gentlemen:
I am glad to have the opportunity to bid welcome to the members of this association and their friends today. The men of this association combine two professions, each of which is rightfully held in high honor by all capable of appreciating the real work of men—the profession of the soldier and the profession of the doctor.
Conditions 'n modern civilization tend more and more to make the average life of the community one of great soffness, of the community one of great softness, of great ease, compared to what has been the case in the past, and, gentlemen, together with all the advantages that have come from this softening of life, thus rendering it more easy, there are certain attendant disadvantages, and it is a very necessary thing that there should be some professions, some trades, where the demands are made now, as have been made in the past upon the heroic qualities in a man, and those demands are made alike upon the solider and upon the doctor, and how much more upon these who are both soliders and doctors: upon the men who have continually to face all the responsibilities and all the risk faced by their brothers in the civilian branch of the profession and who also in time of war must face much the same risks, often exactly the same risks, that are faced by their brothers in arms whose training is to kill and not to cure. (Laughter and applauac.)

It has been my good rortune, gentlemen, to see you both at work in the field, to see them carrying the wounded and dying from the dring line, themselves as much exposed to danger as those they were rescuing, and to see them working day and night in the field baptical afterward, when even the intensity of the strain could hardly keep them awake, so fagged out were they by having each to do the work of ten. Value of the Association. I welcome you here. I am glad to have the chance of seeing you and I wish to say a word of congratulation to you upon this association. In all our modern life we have found it absolutely indispensible to supplemen the work of the individual by the work of individuals gathered into an association. Without this work of the association you cannot give the highest expression to the individual endeavor and it would be a great misfortune if the military members of the surgical and medical professions did not take every advantage of their opportunities in the same way that is taken by the members of the medical and surgical profession who are not in the army and navy or the marine hospital service, but who are in civil life outside. I am glad to see you gathered in this association, and just one word of warning: Pay all possible heed to the scientific side of your work. Perfect yourselves as scientific men able to work with the besterning Pay all possible heed to the scientific side of your work. Perfect yourselves as scientific men, able to work with the best and most delicate apparatus, and never for one moment forget, especially the higher officers among you, that in time of need you will have to do your work with the scantest possible apparatus (laughter and applause) and that then your usefulness will be proportioned, not upon the adequacy of the complaint that you did not have apparatus enough, but upon the way quacy of the complaint that you did not have apparatus enough, but upon the way you have done with what you have. BALLIETT IS FOUND GUILTY Convicted of Using Mails to Defraud After Having Two Trials.

DES MOINES, June 5 .- Leston Balliett was found guilty of using the mails to defraud this afternoon, the jury returning a verdict at 3:25. But a few moments prior to rendering the verdict the jury had asked the court for instructions as to whether it should take into consideration the defendant's acts previous to the date of the indictment. The court stated that he had admitted testimony to that effect. at-arms of the lower house. A widow, three jury then retired and remained out only ten minutes.

Judge Munger gave the defendant until June 26 to make application for a new trial, argument for which will be heard in July.

This present trial of Balliett was begun on May 20 and has continued without delay excepting one day, when a juror was ill A former trial, started last November, was terminated by the death of one of the jurors, so this was virtually the second trial. In instructing the jury the judge stated that it was not necessary to prove that any person actually was defrauded by Balliett; that it was not essential to know whether Balliett told the truth or not in the circulars which he sent out or to show any at place, coming here four years ago from tempt to defraud; that it was necessary for the government to show that it was the intention to defraud at the time the letters complained of in the indictment were mailed, and not subsequent thereto, and that if his intention to defraud came after he mailed the letters he should be found not guilty; and, furthermore, that it was not necessary to prove that Balliett was the originator or author of the letters if he was a party to the attempt to defraud.

All the more delicate work on the figures is done by women, and in a little establishment in New York from which these waxen models are sent out, not only into different parts of the United States, but to Europe as well, a half a dozen pretty young girls are kept constantly employed. The greater number of them are bair planters and dressers, and in the former work their fingers move with lightning-like rapidity. This must be the case, for an expert hair planter will cover three bald wax heads each with a luxuriant growth of blonde brown or auburn locks in a day, and it would take a magic hair restorer to excel that. Hair is one of the expensive parts of the figures. Extra long blonde hair with a natural wave is worth $2 an ounce, and an auburn-haired wax shop lady can buy her red-gold crown for a trifle under $5. Short golden blonde curis are used as a rule for children, and to obtain these, as a matter of economy, the straight hair is curied. Occasionally her hands require a bath more often than this, and in a big New York shop where a great many figures are used a shopgirl can be seen now and then wandering like some kind of a modern Bluebeard from one figure to another, unscrewing the hands and carrying the gruesome pile away in her apron.

It sometimes happens that the wax lady outlives her usefulness to the particular merchant for whom she was made. That is not a hopeless case, for she is practically as good as new after she is sent back to her birthplace. that Captain Warnecke told this remarkable tale: "We were two days out from Banes and about thirty miles from Wattlins island, in the Caribbean sea, when we came upon floating island. I, with the mate and several of the crew, rowed toward it. Thousands of little monkeys scampered all about the shore, and when we were in range they began a bombardment by shying cocoanuts at us. We captured two monkeys. "The following day we discovered another floating island and landed. This time we were greeted by a covey of parrots of most brilliant plumage." Captain Warnecke declared that
