TRIAL WOULD PROVE FAIR

Rear Admiral Crowninshield Stands Up for Officers Accused in Venice.

ACTION OF THE CAPTAIN IS CENSURED

Imprisoned Men Suffered Revolting Indignities at Hands of Italians Because He Did Not Attend to Defense.

LONDON, June 18.—The text of the findings of the court of inquiry in the case of the United States naval officers imprisoned at Venice in the latter part of April throws a completely new light on the affair. It now appears that the United States consul at Venice, Henry J. Johnson, and the lawyer provided him for the defense urged the officers to plead that they were violently drunk. This they utterly declined to do.

Rear Admiral Crowninshield, commanding the European squadron, in reviewing the findings of the court, severely censures Captain James H. Dayton, the commander of the Chicago, for not personally attending to the defense of the officers and comments on the "revolting indignities" suffered by the officers while confined at Venice. Under the circumstances Admiral Crowninshield holds "a court-martial would be a farce."

Captain Dayton's court of inquiry minutely traces the movements of the officers of the Chicago on the day of their arrest and says Lieutenant John S. Dorringer and Surgeon Robert E. Ledbetter were "so intoxicated in the ordinary meaning of the term, and there is no evidence that the other parties were affected by drinking."

The disturbance arose when Captain Robert F. Wynne, commanding the marine guard of the Chicago, seeing Dorringer and Ledbetter sitting outside Florian's cafe, "gave a hail, unusual in this place, resembling 'yi yi yi.'" Disturbance Is in a Cafe.

Lieutenant Dorringer and Surgeon Ledbetter ran toward Captain Wynne, upsetting chairs and two small tables. A large crowd and the police immediately surrounded Lieutenant Dorringer, who endeavored to explain the matter and to get the officers out of the cafe. He was shouting and gesticulating, and were not well controlled by the police. The police seized Lieutenant Dorringer and apparently at the same time the crowd attacked him. Lieutenant Dorringer was roughly handled by the police and it required the assistance of citizens to effect his arrest. But there was no means of distinguishing the persons assisting the police from those who were wantonly attacking the prisoner.

Captain Wynne, Surgeon Ledbetter, Naval Cadet James C. Kress and Langley, a marine, all forcibly entered the cafe, and Lieutenant Dorringer, retreating for the assistance of the civilians, but not attacking the police.

"At the station," it is added in the findings of the court, "there was much excitement. The crowd was at first allowed their way and no one seemed to be in authority. The crowd became more and more excited and the officers made demands and protests. Their treatment in prison was severe and extremely humiliating, but there is no evidence that the prison rules were exceeded."

Self-Defense Against Civilians.

The officers pleaded self-defense against civilians, that no police were knowingly resisted and that they were not aware of the fact that they were being attacked. They claimed that they were being attacked by a crowd of civilians, and that they were forced to use force to protect themselves.

The court refers to the disadvantage at which the officers were placed during the trial, owing to their ignorance of the Italian language and laws, and says:

The interpreter, who was a consular clerk, was not successful or satisfactory. The strong feeling against the officers shown by the crowd was not in any way lessened by the fact that the officers were not allowed to defend themselves. The court finds that the officers were not guilty of the charges against them, and that they were entitled to the same treatment as any other prisoners.

Crowninshield Dismisses Finding.

In quashing all the recommendations for courts-martial Admiral Crowninshield says: "After a minute examination it appears that there was no sufficient evidence adduced by the court of inquiry to establish that the officers were guilty of the charges against them. The weight of the evidence shows that the officers were not guilty of the charges against them. The court finds that the officers were not guilty of the charges against them, and that they were entitled to the same treatment as any other prisoners."

Dispute with a Waiter.

The sum total of the matter is that two officers had a dispute with a waiter, ran amongst chairs and tables, all the tables and chairs being deserted at the time; that one of them upset tables and chairs and that another called out in loud tones in effect, "Get out of here, you scoundrels!" and that these actions may be considered indiscreet or lacking in dignity none of them merit a court-martial and none can be characterized as bringing scandal or disgrace on the navy service.

Hence, the court of inquiry clears the officers of existing public authority or unbecomingly insulting citizens and directs the principal, if not the only, points on which the Italian courts found the parties guilty. The court relieved the officers of the burden of bringing the parties to trial, in which no offense exists, simply to keep a possible, though entirely unauthorized, promise that a court-martial should follow the return of the officers to Italy. They will be admonished to so conduct themselves in the future as to avoid, if possible, the repetition of the occurrence leading to this court of inquiry.

Thinks He Acted Correctly.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The text of the proceedings before the Chicago court of inquiry with Admiral Crowninshield's strong indorsement thereon, contained in the Associated Press dispatches from London, has not yet reached the Navy department, which thus far has had nothing but a telegraphic synopsis of the findings.

Secretary Moody, however, on the basis of the cable reports, has positively made up his mind that Admiral Crowninshield acted correctly in not ordering a court-martial, so unless there is something in the body of the testimony taken by the court of inquiry which is not now known here to exist, it is improbable that he will abandon that conviction.

As to the status of Captain Dayton, the indorsement of Admiral Crowninshield so far as it may reflect on him will go upon the official records, and unless the officer should meanwhile clear himself by asking for a court of inquiry or a court-martial, and securing judgment in his favor, it might affect him when the board of promotions next examines him for promotion. So far as the department is concerned, however, there is the best reason to believe that it wishes to regard the matter as a closed incident, influenced thereto to some degree by the State department, which earnestly desires to avoid the prosecution of a subject that might embitter the existing pleasant relations with Italy.

ABSENT FIFTY-SEVEN YEARS

Man Supposed to Have Been Murdered Returns to His Old Home in Indiana.

CHICAGO, June 18.—Abraham Burns, aged 77 years, who disappeared from his home fifty-seven years ago and was thought to have been murdered in a trappers' feud, has returned to his home in Indiana, "the old folks," as he said. The old man found that his only surviving relative was a brother, Joseph Burns, two years his junior. It was not until the aged man had recalled confidences of their boyhood that either was satisfied of their relationship. Then they went into the house together and announced to all who called that they "guessed they'd live together hereafter."

Back in the '40s the Burns brothers were trappers in the Calumet lake region and after a fight among a number of other trappers the older brother disappeared. He was supposed to have been killed and his body hidden. The parents died with this belief, as did several other members of the family.

Abraham found his way out west and into the mountains of Idaho, where, according to his story, he lived as a hermit miner. Once he made his way by foot to San Francisco, but he soon returned to his mountain life.

The old man had never ridden on a railway train until he commenced the journey home.

Too Great a Risk.

In almost every neighborhood someone has died from an attack of cholera or cholera morbus, often before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. A reliable remedy for these diseases should be kept at hand. The risk is too great for anyone to take. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has undoubtedly saved the lives of more people and relieved more pain and suffering than any other medicine in use. It can always be depended upon.

Increased Endowment a Surprise.

PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—During the 16th annual commencement exercises of the University of Pennsylvania, the President Harrison announced that Joseph H. Barton, founder of the Wharton school of finance and economy at the university, had increased his endowment of the school from $200,000 to $500,000. The information came as a complete surprise to the large gathering and was greeted with cheers.
