Eleven Young Men Take Their Degrees at University Hall. MOHE PRIZES WON BY CLASS MEMBERS

GRADUATES OF CREIGHTON

Edward F. Leary and Linus A. Lilly Successful in Competition Open to Students of Six Colleges.

At Creighton university hall Friday night eleven young men in academic caps and gowns received from the hand of Bishop Scannell diplomas bearing testitmony that they had finished the course of study in that institution, and were ready to enter upon the sterner duties of life. Both pit and galleries of the hall were filled with relatives and friends of the graduates. The program consisted of six orations, interspersed with vocal and instrumental music, and closed with the address of Bishop Scannell. The degree of master of arts was con ferred upon Andrew M. Flynn, and the degree of bachelor of arts was conferred upon Weir D. Coffman, William F. Condon, James P. Lane, J. Frederick Langdon, Edward F. Leary, William P. Lynch, Hugh A McCaffery, William J. McCaffery, James H. McShane and John E. Quinn.

Weir D. Coffman was valedictorian of the class, and delivered his oration with an easy and natural grace. "We do not pretend to revolutionize the universe, as the omic papers charge us," said he, "but we are determined to play in life, if not a heroic, at least a manly and Christian part."

He saw many things in the federal, state and municipal affairs of the nation which, in his opinion, were scarcely consonant with the lofty ideals of the early patriots.

A quartet comprising Charles P. Moriarity, Francis C. McGinn, Louis P. Buss. man and James C. Swift, sung "Pale in the Amber West," and responded to a hearty encore.

William J. McCaffery spoke from the theme, "Individual Character," in which he emphasized the importance of early training, and William P. Lynch followed with "Religion, the Basis of Character." Mr. Lynch gave the church credit for furnishing the common laws of England, and for supplying the fundamental principles of modern civilization. William F. Condon devoted his remarks to Pope Leo XIII, extolling him as one of the greatest factors for good of the present day. The University orchestra, seven members of which were also members of the gradusting class, played, on mandolins, the waltz, "Nur Ein Traum," with a plano accompaniment.

Diplomas, Medals and Honor.

Medals and honors were then conferred to receive them. The gold medal for the highest honors of the class of 1902 was

He must know his own moral na-ture and the responsibilities which that nature imposes upon him. In this branch of human knowledge every man is bound to be, to some extent, a specialist. If it be important for a man to know the forces of nature and to be able to control him-aelf. A knowledge of ethics, of the differ-ence between right and wrong, every man must have, and this knowledge must be so much a part of himself, so ready at hand and so overmastering in its influ-ence as to form and give a complexion and expression to his very habits. Mere knowledge does not command our respect and still less our love. We do not love the brilliancy of the cold, heartless, in-tellectual' man, but we love the generous, warm-hearted, sympathetic man of whom everyone says that he is a good man. After all, it is not his knowledge, but his habits which make the generous, warm-hearted, sympathetic man of whom everyone says that he is a good man. Trinity Chapel Filled to Doors at Fuseral of Late Eugene Agustus Hoffman.

Desirable as all this is, however, it is not enough to complete a man's education, to develop fully all his faculties and to enable him to bring forth the best that is in him. Man is by nature religious; he longs after an immortal life, because he desires to know forever and to live forever. He longs after that knowledge that will satisfy the needs of his intellect and the good that will satisfy the longings of his heart; but he will attain to neither if he be not the heir to an immortal life, and religion alone as-sures him that he is the heir to such a life and that in it his hopes and his longings will be fully realized.
