PRICES WELL MAINTAINED ON ALL LINES.

Outlook for Future Business Considered Very Pavorable and Local Jobbers Preparing for Heavtest Fall Trade on Record.

Jobbers and manufacturers in practically Jebbers and manufacturers in practically all lines report their midsummer trade as starting out in a very satisfactory manner. They have been saying for some time past that all they needed was warmer weather to make summer lines move more freely and now they are more convinced of that fact than ever. In checking up their sales for the month of June they find, however, that the volume of business transacted was much larger than would and, however, that the volume of business transacted was much larger than would naturally be expected considering the unseasonable weather that was experienced and, in fact, with very few exceptions both wholesalers and manufacturers say they sold more goods last month than ever before in June.

According to all reports received from the country June trade with retailers was hardly up to expectations, but that fact the country June trade with retailers was hardly up to expectations, but that fact does not seem to have discouraged them as is shown by the amount of goods they bought. Jobbers think their customers bought more for the trade they expected in the future than what they were having at that time. Traveling men who came in for the Fourth said that the feeling in the country was very confident and that everyone seems to believe that the outlook for the future could not well be improved upon. Crops are in good condition and retailers look for an enormous summer and fall trade.

So far as the markets are concerned there is not very much to be sai2, as most

So far as the markets are concerned there is not very much to be said, as most lines are seiling in about the same notches they were a week ago. Most of the chang's that have taken place are in the direction of higher rather than of lower prices, and present indications are that quotations will remain good and firm on most staples for some time to come.

Sugar Remains Steady.

The sugar market is quoted the same as it was a week ago. Jobbers say that the demand so far this season has been a little disappointing, owing partly to the cold weather and also to the fact that the small fruit crop and especially cherries was short all over the country. It is thought however, that there will be a marked improvement in the demand from this time on if the weather is normal.

The market on rolled and package oats is advancing quite rapidly and considerably higher prices are expected before the new crop arrives on the market. The present high prices are caused by the scarcity of milling oats.

reprices are caused by the scarcity of milling oats.

Family white fish is also higher than it was a week ago. The high price of meat it is said, is causing higher prices to rule on fish than usual.

There has been no change in canned goods of any importance, though the market may be quoted firm on nearly sill lines. Jellies, starch, syrups and everything into which corn enters is advancing and it is predicted that still higher prices will rule before the new crop of corn is available.

There has been no change in coffee or tea during the week under review and. In fact, practically all staple lines of groceries not mentioned above are selling in about the same notches they were a week ago.

Shipping Out Fall Goods.

Local dry goods jobbers are very busy ecciving fall goods and filling the orders or heavy stuff that they have taken during the last ninety days for July shipment. for heavy stuff that they have taken during the last ninety days for July shipment. Advance business was very great this season and in fact heavier than ever before. It is thought that if conditions in the country continue as favorable for the next thirty days as they are now house trade this fail will be something previously experienced. Traveling men say that although business with retailers was a little lighter last month than they expected, still there has been a great improvement the last few days and everyone is looking for a still heavier demand from this time on. Cotton goods continue on just about the same basis they have been during the entire spring season. There is some danger, however, so the trade says, of experiencing some difficulty in getting orders filled in the future, as popular lines are well sold up.

Collections continue very satisfactory.

Hardware a Little Quiet.

Boot and shoe jobbers are also shipping out their fall lines and as they have a larger line of advance orders on hand than ever before they are working overtime to get their orders filled. Traveling men are still booking a good many orders and everything at the present time points to a continued demand for some time to come. Immediate business is of course rather light as is slways the case at this time of the year. A few siging up orders are coming in, but not very many. It is thought that a week or two of hot weather will go a long way toward breaking retailers stocks, and especially their lines of low shoes in both men's and women's wear.

The rubber business is a little quiet just now. The rains have of course created considerable demand for rubber clothing and retailers as a rule have cleaned out their supplies of that class of goods in pretty good shape. There was also some demand for foctwear, but at this time of the year retailers will not buy many summer rubbers.

Fruits and Produce.

Fruits and Produce. There has been a good lively demand all the week for fresh fruits and vegetables. The strawberry season is now practically at an end and there is nothing coming on the market suitable for shipping. Gooseberries are also out of the market. Callfornia fruit is coming to the market. the market suitable for shipping. Goose-berries are also out of the market. Callifornia fruit is coming in quite freely and prices are gradually going down. Watermelons have also taken a drop. In vegetables there has not been any important changes, though of course the tendency of prices is downward as the supply becomes more abundant. The prices at which the different lines are selling will be found in another column.

Poultry took quite a drop the latter partof the week owing to fairly liberal receipts and a rather limited demand. Spring chickens are of course becoming older and in better supply so that prices will decline from this time on. Butter is also a little lower than it was a set ago owing to a decline in eastern markets.

The egg market, however, has firmed up a little. Receipts are not at all heavy and besides that there are so many candled out that the actual number of salable eggs is rather small.

HOGS—There was a light run of hogs here today, which makes the supply for the week considerably less than for either the same days of last week or of last year. On the start packers were rather bearish, but as they failed to get the hogs they raised their hands and the early trading was done on a basis of steady to strong prices. As the morning advanced the market seemed to gain in strength, and in some cases sales were made that looked strong to be higher. Owing to the limited offerings the bulk was disposed of in good season. Packers seemed to be anxious for the good weight hogs, but the light stuff was neglected the same as usual. The quality today was only medium, so that the sales do not show up the full strength of the market. The bulk of the better weight hogs sold from $7.00 to $7.75 and as high as $7.50 km was paid. The medium weights went largely from $7.60 to $7.70 and the light stuff sold from $7.00 to $7.70 and the light stuff sold from $7.00 to $7.70 and the light stuff sold from $7.50 down. A few loads that came in late did not sell quite as well.

few loads that came in late did not sell quite as well.

The general market has been in good shape all the week, with the general tendency of prices upward, and in fact the high point of the year to date has been reached this week. There was a slight reaction on Thursday, but that loss was regained today, so that the total advance for the week is close to a dime. Representative sales:

liberal buyers of the better grades, but the common grades of killers have been rather

For this early in the season there has been a liberal demand for feeders at the prices quoted below. The market on desirable grades held fully steady and sellers had little difficulty in disposing of such kinds. Common stuff, though, was very slow sale. slow sale.

VICTIM OF UNGUIDED YOUTH

Boy Goes to the Reform School

Until He Becomes of

Judge Estelle has sentenced Will Davis, aged 17, to serve at the state reform school until he is of age. The boy had pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny and to another of daylight breaking and entering. Some of his acquaintances insist that the boy is the victim of an unguided youth, his parents having died some years ago leaving him without a relative and apparently without a substantial friend in all the world. The first man to assist him at all, it is said, was a saloonkeeper with a heart that was better than his way of doing business, and with the boy it was the old story of the vice that is first abhorred, then pitied and then embraced. Majority Charged with Having Partaken Too Liberally of Liquid Joy.
