

SOCIETY'S DAYS ARE DULL

Smart People Either Gone or Going Away for the Summer.

STAY-AT-HOMES HOVER AROUND LINKS

Golf the Refuge of Those Who Must Remain at Home and the Country and Field Clubs Their Havens.

With half of society out of town for the summer and the other half so absorbed in preparation to depart that they might as well be gone, those who from choice or some other reason have made up their minds to spend the summer at home have not been having an especially interesting time of it late.

With such a state of things existing, the stay-at-home has little to console him aside from the fact that he is not to be entirely alone at the Country club this summer, because it has been announced that certain of the benefactors whose families will be absent until fall have decided to take up their abode at that popular resort, and the coming weeks don't look quite as empty as they might have been—to some people, at least.

Of course the Fourth was the event upon which everything else hinged last week, and those who did not spend the day at the Country club or the Field club, or some other place, embraced it as an occasion to entertain some friends at dinner or luncheon, while those who found occasion to extend any such hospitality earlier in the week used decorations suggestive of the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dempster of Omaha, who were in Hudson, S. D., during the tornado which visited that part of the state, report a thrilling experience. They stopped at the St. James hotel, where the windows and doors were blown out and which was partially unroofed, all the lights being extinguished at once. The panic-stricken guests started for the cellar, but the trap door resisted their most strenuous efforts until a wedge was found which pried it open, when all bolted down the steps to the dark and noisome places, holding the doors closed against the fury of the wind until the storm abated.

Weddings and Engagements.

Mrs. R. Feiler, of 218 North Twenty-fourth street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Bessie, to Mr. Dave H. Harding.

Among the recent out-of-town weddings of interest to Omaha people was that of Miss Irene Labagh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Labagh, pioneer residents of Miss Peycke, although now residing in Kansas City, is really an Omaha young woman, having been born and raised here, where she spent her childhood days. She is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Peycke, long prominent socially in German-American circles of this city. Mr. Smith is a rising young business man at the head of the Reichenberg-Smith wholesale jewelry establishment.

PRESIDENT AT OYSTER BAY

Special Train Conveys Roosevelt from Pittsburg to His Summer Home.

OVATION EXTENDED ALONG THE ROUTE

Speech in Relation to Trust Situation Said to Be Merely Forerunner of Determined Effort to Have Congress Take Up Matter.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., July 5.—President Roosevelt arrived here at 5:10 this afternoon and was given a very cordial welcome. The train approached the little station of the Long Island railroad every whistle in the village, through a prearranged signal, was set going and the old friends and associates of the president gathered on the platform to extend their greetings. When he was at the prospect, completely surrounded by a throng of admirers, he prevented his children, Kermet, Ethel and Archie, who had been awaiting his coming, from getting to him. When finally they did so he embraced them in a manner that gave unmistakable evidence of his delight at being "home."

Mrs. Roosevelt did not come to the depot, but Assistant Secretary Loeb was there. After exchanging greetings with his friends and neighbors the president entered an open motor car for a time and started in a violent rain and thunderstorm for Sagamore Hill.

Neither he nor the children seemed any the worse for their drenching. During the journey from Pittsburg to Oyster Bay the president frequently spoke of how glad he was at the prospect of being with his family and escaping to a considerable extent many of the official cares which had beset him in Washington. The trip across New York to the Long Island railroad depot was made in carriages under the escort of four mounted officers. One of these was Patrolman Hefferan, whom Mr. Roosevelt, when police commissioner, had rewarded for signal bravery in stopping a runaway horse.

The president's opinion as to the extent of being with his family and escaping to a considerable extent many of the official cares which had beset him in Washington. The trip across New York to the Long Island railroad depot was made in carriages under the escort of four mounted officers. One of these was Patrolman Hefferan, whom Mr. Roosevelt, when police commissioner, had rewarded for signal bravery in stopping a runaway horse.

Object of Trust Talk.

It has been ascertained that the president's speech at Pittsburg yesterday in relation to the trust situation was merely the forerunner of determined efforts by him to have congress take up that question and enact definite legislation at its next session for the control and supervision of trusts.

Recently the president and Attorney General Knox held a conference with Representative Littlefield of Maine, whose knowledge of constitutional law is admitted, at which Mr. Littlefield was invited to prepare a bill for the regulation and control of trusts. It was stated that before congress with the endorsement and influence of the president back of it. The bill will be submitted at the beginning of the next session, but before this is done the president, Attorney General Knox and Mr. Littlefield will have frequent conferences as to the details.

In addition to this proposed action the president is going to talk upon the trust question a good deal on the several trips to be made by him in the fall. He has announced to his friends that the question is a vital one and that he proposes to push it vigorously until there is some action taken by congress.

DINNER PLEASES WOODRUFF

King's Donation Comes to Those Who Appreciate a Full Stomach.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) LONDON, July 5.—(New York World Cablegram-Special Telegram).—"I consider the king's dinner a thorough, practical success," said Lieutenant Governor Woodruff at New York yesterday. Woodruff spent this afternoon in the forecourt of Hotel Cecil, where he had just arrived from the championship athletic sports at Stamford Bridge. "The king's object was to celebrate his coronation by giving food to all his subjects who wanted it a good, substantial meal, and if all diners were of the same class as the 15,000 I saw in Bishop's park, Fulham, the king ought to feel happy over his success."

"There is no doubt that it was the real, genuine London poor and the London poor is the wretchedest, toughest kind of people I know. They are not like our poor. They exist to such a considerable extent on beer that it makes them sabby and boisterous. I went to Fulham on the London police last night. Although I was quite ready to help in any way possible, everything was so well provided for that my wife and I merely looked on. I wore a steward's badge."

"The people thoroughly enjoyed their food. It was no mere formality. They came not merely curiously, but with good, substantial appetites, and what they could not eat they took away with them to those at home, together with the coronation cups, the queen's chocolate and the paper-mache plates to keep as mementoes of the great occasion."

"There were several Americans at the Fulham dinner. They were greatly impressed with the perfect organization, the happiness of the people and the kindly interest shown to the poor and the prince of Wales, who walked along the tables, although it had been arranged that they should not alight from their carriages, having to attend other dinners nine miles away."

"I think it was a splendid idea, admirably carried out, benefiting a vast number of London's veriest poor."
