OUTBURST OF ENTHUSIASM AT LONDON

From Time Conquering Hero Set Foot in Metropolis Until Disappearance Beneath Portal of Palace it is One Long Applause.

At Southampton He Bore with the tedious travels of self-important local officials not without symptoms of impatience, and he replied to their long-winded panegyrics in two sentences.

His manner to everyone, from the prince of Wales and Earl Roberts to the enthusiastic railroad porter who held out his hand for a shake (that was coldly given) was the same.

The prince of Wales greeted him with unaccommodating animation, grasping his right hand warmly and the same time laying the other hand upon Lord Kitchener's arm.

Lord Kitchener saluted him with the same smile he bestowed on everybody else. There was no effusiveness, still less, any air of superiority, but a genial modesty of demeanor.

He has grown stouter than the giant shadow he appeared when he returned from the Sudan, but he still retains a spare, soldierly figure and the precision of movement of a man who takes every act is guided by systems and method.

Lord Roberts' head reached only about three buttons above Lord Kitchener's belt. They presented a striking contrast, as Lord Kitchener, with his right hand raised against his peaked cap in formal salute, advanced to meet his chief.

Arrival at Southampton.

SOUTHAMPTON, July 12.—The steamer Orontea, which left Cape Town at 12 with Lord Kitchener and staff on board, arrived here at half past 8 o'clock this morning.

owing to the fact that Major Gordon, who was also a passenger on the steamer, had been attacked by illness, Lord Kitchener and his staff only were allowed to land.

Lord Kitchener landed at 9:15 a. m. He was accorded a magnificent welcome from a huge throng of people.

The freedom of the borough was conferred on Lord Kitchener and the party was then obliged to hurry away in order to meet their London engagements.

LONDON, July 12.—Lord Kitchener reached London at 12:45 p. m. and his progress through the metropolis was one of the most memorable of the many remarkable events of the last three years.

From the moment he set foot in London to the time of his disappearance beneath the portal of St. James palace, Kitchener received such an outburst of popular enthusiasm as quite overshadowed the demonstrations on previous and similar occasions.

BRITISH WANT A WEST POINT

Army Reformers Will Endeavor to Put Sandhurst on Par with American Institution.

LONDON, July 12.—To the dismay of the government the agitation on the subject of "rustication" of the Sandhurst cadets, who were suspected by their superior officers of being concerned in the recent incendiary fire at the military college, daily gather more influential supporters.

Winston Spencer Churchill and Lord Hugh Cecil now have enlisted Lord Rosebery, the Duke of Northumberland and hundreds of other prominent men, regarding the cadets in their favor.

What at first seemed to be a trifling matter is now a grave source of annoyance to the government in spite of endeavor of the entire ministry, as the Saturday Review puts it, to shelter themselves behind Lord Roberts, the commander in chief. They are still in a dilemma and Lord Roberts has lost more of his waning popularity.

SERIOUS PROBLEM AT NORTH PLATTE

More Men at Work at Grand Island Than Before Strike and Company Proposes to Further Increase Number.

More than four weeks have elapsed since the strike in the Union Pacific shops was declared and each side is apparently as determined as if the struggle had just begun. The strikers are basing their claims of success upon the assertion that none of their men, or at least a very insignificant number, has gone back to the company's employ, while the officials of the railroad produce an array of stern figures to show that they have a comparatively good-sized force, sufficient, they claim, to meet the demands made upon the shops.

Each side expresses absolute confidence in the ultimate outcome of the fight. The officials of the road insist that their motive power has not been injured or jeopardized by this strike and they are proceeding with the work, and that they are different to the strikers. The latter make persistent claims that they have succeeded in seriously affecting the motive power of the railroad and crippled its shop facilities to such an extent that the company will be forced within a short time to adopt some different policy.

COMPANY PRODUces FIGURES.

To demonstrate the actual conditions, an official of the Union Pacific Saturday produced some figures taken from his daily report sheet, which show the status in each shop on the system. Beginning with Omaha, the schedule shows that in the local shops, Council Bluffs and the outround-shops the company has 675 men, which is about 300 less than the normal force in these places. In the Omaha shops alone there are said to be 510 men in all departments.

The number of machinists now at work in the Omaha shops, 16, according to the company's statement, within three or four of the original number.

At Armstrong the force is said to be almost of normal size. A large number of strikers, it is said, have returned to work and the rest of the places have been filled by outside men. The company has ceased employing men there.

At Cheyenne the total number of shopmen now in active service is 344. Of this number twenty-two are skilled machinists and about half the normal blacksmith force is at work. These reports from the three largest shops on the system show that the company has enough men at work to make a fair showing.

AT OTHER POINTS ON LINE.

Normal sized forces are said to be at work at Ellis, Junction City and Salina, Kan. Denver reports three-fourths of the force at work in the boilermakers and machinists' departments, and full forces in other departments. At Grand Island a full force is employed and at Evanston, where the men were so slow to strike, seventeen machinists are reported at work, as against seven before.

At North Platte has presented the most serious problem the company has yet to contend with. The men there were in a quandary for some time and finally striking they are among the most determined of any on the system. Notwithstanding these facts about the system show that the force of 176 men is employed in these shops, a fact which they say will surprise the strikers. The original number employed at North Platte was 200. Eleven of those now at work there are machinists, twenty-four boilermakers, and sixteen men are engaged in the boiler shops, though no real boilermakers are at work in the remainder of the departments the force is at a normal size.

The officials regard North Platte as their weakest point and get one of them sent Saturday that it would be the easiest to handle as soon as they decided to take hold of it in earnest.

GRAND ISLAND FORCE INCREASED.

The reports from Grand Island show a larger force of men at work than before the strike. As was stated in The Bee some days ago, this shop's force is to be enlarged still more and it is said to be the intention of the company that the force to three times its original size.

Asked if those men now at work in the various shops were on the piecework system as an official of the road Saturday replied: "No sir, they are getting exactly the wages paid in the shops when the strike began. No reductions have been made and no piecework has been introduced. We did not intend to introduce piecework at once anyway, and of course, we could not do such a thing with the men even if we wished. This is a great deal of idle talk about this piecework matter. This company could not properly introduce piecework all over its system within less than five years."

The company does not pretend to say that but a very small proportion of those men now in its employ are former strikers, but officials maintain that the most of them are competent men. It is fact, they admit, that in the very large majority of cases the strikers have not returned to work. The officials profess not to be worrying over whether the strikers return to work. They say they wanted to give their old men a chance to resume their positions and since they have refused to do so, most of them, it is not the part of the company to lose them. They are waiting to see if they will bring in new men and will keep on in this line, the officials say. Thirty-seven non-union men were imported into the Omaha shops Saturday from Chicago and more will be brought later.
