REVENUE TAX COLLECTIONS

Penalty on Liquor Licenses Will Ac erne After Thursday of Present Week.

Thursday is the last day upon which paynents can be made to the collector of the internal revenue for licenses for, the currept year without papalty. On Friday a penalty of $12.50 will attach to each dealer in malt and spiritous liquor who has failed to pay, and this penalty will become parof the tax. At the office of the collector it is said that the retail druggists are the worst class the collector has to deal with when it comes to paying the annual tax, as the liquor business with many is simply incidental and they forget to renew their lithe cense. The tax collections so far are better than expected, and it is said that the sale of stamps this month will be almost equal to the sales of a year ago, when the war revenue law was in force. WIDOW THOMPSON SECURES HIS ARREST

Omaha Police Aid in Bringing Romance to a Showdown, but Settlement is Not Certain.

Thomas V. Walton, who cut such a swath in Omaha during the fall and winter of the last year on money alleged to have belonged to a sweetheart and bride that was to be in Boston, is an inmate of the city She who caused his arrest is Mrs Elizabeth Thompson, the rich widow, sweetheart and bride-to-be, of Boston, who arirved in Omaha yesterday morning.

Walton was arrested at the Merchants notel by Detectives Savage and Dunn. He had been there several days, coming from Council Bluffs where he has been stopping under an assumed name. Yesterday afternoon J. W. Gilbert, attorney for Mrs. Thompson, filed a complaint against Walton charging him with embezzlement, the amount being a few dollars more than $1,800. The complaint was filed in Justice Carson's court in Council Bluffs.

Met as Lovers Meet.

Mrs. Thompson and Walton had a longdrawn-out conference in the latter's cell at the city jail last night. The two met as long-separated eweethearts and not as enemies-at-law. Mrs. Thompson, whose avordupois is too sufficient to allow her to enter the door of the cell in the usual way had to "sidle" in. But her reception was none the less cordial because of this. Walton recognized her instanter and with cry of joy sprang to meet her. He was enveloped in two large sleeves made in the manner of kimonas and his two hands peeped out beneath them on each side. A longdrawn-out kiss, a few "Tommys" and "Lizzies" and the two had met after an absence of almost a year.

Mrs. Thompson seated herself upon large arm chair and Walton occupied the seat of honor on the right arm of the chair. The conference continued for several hours and upon it depends whether or not Walton will be prosecuted.

At 10 o'clock the conference came to a Walton won out. Mrs. Thompson announced to the desk sergeant that she had agreed to give him a chance to return east and settle up their financial difference "He is too young to send to the penitentiary," she said, "a good boy with a promising future, gone wrong, is all. I won't prosecute him this time." She then went on a hunt for the proper authorities to secure Walton's release.

Walton's Swath in Omaha

Walton struck Omaha by storm last fall and immediately became a general favorite in society circles. He had money to burn and burned it. Last month it developed that the money on which Walton was cutting such a swath belonged to Mrs. Thompson, to whom he was engaged to marry. The facts came out when A. C. Burwell. a partner in the drug business of - which Mrs. Thompson was the head, came to Omaha after Walton,

In October Walton had been sent by Mrs. Thompson to Logan, Ia., there to dispose of a farm which she owned. He was to return in time for their wedding, which was then shortly to occur. Walton didn't return. He sold the farm for $5,600 and of this sum $2,675 was sent to the waiting

Before Mr. Burwell arrived in Omaha was in Kansas City, where he had accompanied two Gmaha young women June 12. The girls returned home June 28 without Walton, and until recently no further trace of him was found. The Boston widow finally called upon the police to assist her. the latter would be decided in his favor, Walton was located several days ago and the widow was notified. Yesterday morning she arrived in Omaha and Walton's arrest followed.

One who was intimate with Walton during his high flying in Omaha said that Mrs. Thompson wanted Walton more than she did the money he is alleged to have embezzled. He said Walton had several letters from the widow in which she practically gave him the farm he sold or the proceeds from the sale of it. She did this because she was troubled with heart disease and feared that if she died during Walton's absence he would not get the money. In one letter she said: "This letter is better than a will for you. No one can beat you out of the money."

Mrs. Thompson said the reports in afternoon papers that she was past 40 years of age were untrue. "I am only 35," she said, "and Mr. Walton is 33. As to my weight the papers differ, but I cannot enlighten the public as to that for I have not weighed since I was 15 years of age."

Mrs. Thompson's attorneys say they intend to prosecute, and the time of the hearing will depend upon whether or not Walton will return to Iowa without requisition pa-
