FRENCH COMPANY TURNS HIM DOWN

Refuses to Become a Part of His Great Atlantic Shipping Combine.

SAILS FOR HOME THE PRESENT WEEK

Buy a New Mansion in London and a Million Dollars Worth of Old Silver at an Auction.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—J. Pierpont Morgan still calls for New York on the steamer Oceanic, which will leave Liverpool next Wednesday, although he is as busy as a bee in London.

Since his arrival in Europe, April 9, the "steel king" has afforded the most striking proof ever witnessed that commerce is now the sovereign ruler of the world.

Mr. Morgan heralded his arrival by saying: "I am coming for rest." But from the moment he landed in London, every conceivable interest on this side of the Atlantic was plunged into a fever of apprehensive expectancy.

During his ten days' stay in London he put the finishing touches on the formation of the Atlantic Shipping trust, which was proclaimed when announced as the Waterloo of British supremacy on the sea.

Everything was done absolutely until the official tidings of this epoch-making operation were revealed, thus increasing the shock to public opinion, which had been lulled into security by the assurances.

During this time Mr. Morgan had a private audience with the king at Marlborough house, met Lord Salisbury, then prime minister, at Clinton Dawkins's house, as well as General Balfour, the president of the board of directors of the Anglo-Siam Corporation, the first lord of the admiralty, the chiefs of the two state departments most urgently heading his freely offered declaration that his aims were inspired by the single-minded purposes of the good of humanity and that there was nothing he cherished so deep as affection for an continued domination over the seas by the British mercantile marine.

Meets One Defeat.

He crossed April 29, to Paris, where he tried, but failed, to induce the French Transatlantic company to enter into the combine.

There he was waited on by M. Waldeck-Rousseau, then the French premier, to whom he gave ten minutes of his time before leaving for Aix-les-Bains, where he faithfully submitted himself to the cure. This apparently was a quiet, restful period. But speculation was set afloat again by the arrival of his steam yacht Corsair at Gibraltar, supposedly to take its owner on a trip to the Mediterranean.

Having concluded the cure he joined Corsair at Venice for a cruise among the great lakes as a restorative of the weakening effects of the Aix-les-Bains, but he soon had a further engagement in his earnest conversation with King Edward earnestly desired to meet him at a dinner three days later in London.

Mr. Morgan took a train, traveled sixty hours direct to London and arrived barely in time to try on the knee breeches, white stockings and black levee coat ordered in advance by his son, as the liverly which he should don if he wished to dine with the king.

Questioned by King.

In that un-American apparel, not without reluctance, the "steel king" ate dinner with Edward VII, who, King him apart afterward engaged him in earnest conversation for half an hour. The purport of this dialogue remains untold, but it was noted by others present that the king piled Mr. Morgan with a string of questions which seemingly were argued with the accustomed laconic directness that was in his wonted manner.

The next day Mr. Morgan started for Trieste, steaming thence around the Adriatic and visiting Trieste, where he found an invitation awaiting him, sent through the American minister at Venice, to visit the emperor of Austria. But the "steel king" was obliged to decline this compliment from the head of the house of Hapsburg, having to return to London to see King Edward crowned "sovereign of Britain and Ireland" and of the dominions beyond the seas and emperor of India," under the shadow of $1,300,000 worth of treasury lent by Mr. Morgan himself.

Finding the coronation postponed, Mr. Morgan again joined his yacht and sailed to Ostend, where, in the usual course, the king of the Belgians paid homage to the "steel king."

Dinner with Emperor.

Thence Mr. Morgan steamed to Kiel in response to an imperial invitation from the Kaiser, who probably has a lurking fear that the divine right of kings is rapidly being superseded by the divine right of dollars. At Kiel Mr. Morgan lunched and dined aboard the imperial yacht Hohenzollern and had two long conferences with the Kaiser, conferring afterwards that he had been impressed by the Kaiser, for whom he condescended to say he entertained a liking.

Going next to Berlin he was told by the imperial chancellor, Count von Bethmann, and was showered with invitations, which were declined. Since his return to London he has been passing the time quietly, buying a new London mansion and some $1,300,000 worth of old silver, now on exhibition for a hospital fund.

When Arthur Balfour became prime minister his first care seems to have been to gratify Mr. Morgan, who was bid to meet him at dinner in the House of Commons. But the philosophic conservative, with the best wishes of the world, found little in common with the founder of the twentieth century dynasty, which is to have the universe for its domain, and which aims at subordinating race, nation, politics and parties to the divine right of gold.

HAPPENINGS IN THE SMART SET

Mrs. Ronalds Attends Coronation on Personal Invitation of Queen.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) LONDON, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—Mrs. Ronalds, who was one of Queen Alexandra's guests at the coronation, will leave tomorrow for Scotland with her son, Reginald, and her daughter, Mrs. Ritchie, for a round of country house visits, including a stay at the Bradley Martins at Balmacrae. Mrs. Ronalds received her coronation invitation with a charming letter dictated by the queen to Hon. Charlotte Knollys, her private secretary.

John Leitch, who before marriage was Francis Helms Beckwith of New York, attended the coronation as the wife of the heir to the barony of Leitch. She subsequently lunched on Piccadilly with a very smart party, invited by Mrs. Wornor, the wife of the late Lord Leitch, and the South African multi-millionaire.

Lord and Lady Chesham (the latter formerly was Miss Elizabeth French of New York) had an exciting experience over the will of the baron, who died recently. The late baron habitually carried the will around with him, and the case containing it was stolen from his luggage when he went to Scotland last year. As he mind failed he could not make a new will. Court had decided now to grant probate to the brother and successor on a draft of the stolen will, which had been left in the possession of a lawyer by the thief, a low fellow sentenced to servitude, who testified that he destroyed the document, being disgusted at its apparent worthlessness.

Mrs. Arthur Paget, who is clever at everything she attempts, has developed into one of the best bridge players in society. Her devotion to the game is only second to that of the duchess of Devonshire, who has been nicknamed "Port Vichio" (old bridge), and Constance, duchess of Manchester, who is called "the great duchess" (bridge of rights), from the deep-drawn sigh with which she always greets the "lucky" Mrs. Paget did not go to the Covet regatta, preferring to remain in town for a series of bridge parties arranged by herself and Countess Howe, at which considerable sums changed hands. These devotees to the game often play the afternoon through and resume immediately after dinner, continuing until the small hours.

James Gordon Bennett is about to take a party on a coast-to-coast tour of the Adriatic coast and along the west Balkan coast in his luxurious steam yacht Lyralstra. Mr. Bennett's party will include Mr. and Mrs. George Batten and Mrs. Edward Burke, both women are particularly admired by King Edward.

MOTHER AND SON SHARE ALIKE

Mrs. Mackay and Clarence Sole Executors of Estate of Late John W. Mackay.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) LONDON, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—Mrs. John W. Mackay and her son, Clarence H. Mackay, have been appointed sole executors of the "bonanza king" will.

The world correspondent is informed on the best authority that they divided equally between themselves the estate of the testator, and that they have joint power to administer it, neither being able to do anything without the consent of the other.

The London mansion on Carlton House Terrace had already been a gift from Mr. Thomas Mackay, so the residence, with its contents, including a marine guard of twelve, and could land a force of about fifty men all told.

A Colt rapid-fire gun which it has shared could be sent ashore with a landing party. Mackay has eight 4-inch guns in his main battery, four 5-pounders and two 1-pounders in its secondary battery, all rapid-fire, and under the threat of these guns it is quite unlikely that either the Haytian gunboat or General Firmin's force ashore would care to make an issue.

Acting secretary of the Navy Darling today sent the following cablegram to Commander McCrea of Mackay:

Your actions are approved. Cutting cable or interference with other than Haytian telegrams not to be permitted. PORT AU PRINCE, Aug. 9.—About 400 volunteer Fouchardists, supported by a regular regiment, attacked Petit Goave yesterday. After a severe battle General Chloey, the Firminist commander, left the town, after having set fire to it. The fire destroyed the place almost entirely, only two German halls remaining the same.

The killed and wounded during the engagement were numerous on both sides. Fifty Firminists were killed by the attacking troops and fifteen wounded men who had taken refuge in the church were burned to death. It is reported here that General Chloey and his lieutenants escaped on a schooner.

Petit Goave is situated on the bay of Gonaives, forty-eight miles west-southwest of Port Au Prince. It had a good harbor and an active foreign trade.

M. Fouchard is a candidate for the presidency of Hayti, in opposition to M. Firmin.

WORKS THE ODEON THEATER

American Student Passes Himself for Police Commissioner's Wife and Occupies a Box.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) PARIS, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—An American art student named Margaret Wells has been sent to jail for impersonating another woman and cheating. She is about 20 years old and pretty.

The commissary of police to the Latin quarter, accompanied by a woman, went to the Odeon theater Thursday evening and asked to be admitted to his regular box. The chief usher took him aside, saying: "I warn you that you will have an unpleasant scene, because your wife already occupies the box with three friends."

The commissary of police protested vehemently: "This is my wife."

Miss Wells was called into the lobby to explain, she laughingly confessed that she had noticed that the commissary had never occupied the box, so she presented herself frequently, saying: "I am the wife of the commissary; show me our box."

In that way, she admitted, she had cheaply made returns for all the theatrical entertainments, dinners, social and sporting parties tendered by her friends. She had persuaded the commissary's wife so often that when the real wife went to the theater the officials thought the commissary was bringing an impostor.

TOURING IN WATER AND AIR

Virginia Erie Takes Trips in a Submarine Boat and a Balloon.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) PARIS, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—Virginia Erie has accepted an invitation from the minister of marine, Camille Pelletan, to take a trip next Tuesday in a submarine boat which is now moored near Paris, as far as Rouen, returning by a special train.

On Thursday she will make a balloon ascension in the Esclair, which belongs to the duchess D'Uzes, under the pilotage of Count Castellion de Balot, Victor.

VICTORY FOR SALNAV

Firminist General Defeats Haytian Provisional Government Troops.

CAPTURES MANY MUNITIONS OF WAR

Command Under General Nord at Limbe is Completely Routed.

GOVERNMENT LOSS IS VERY HEAVY

Many Soldiers Are Killed and Great Number Taken Prisoners.

TO PROTECT AMERICAN INTERESTS

United States Gunboat Mackias is at Cape Haytien to Prevent Cutting of Cable and Other Damage.

CAPE HAYTIEN, Aug. 9.—General Albert Salnav has completely defeated the army of the provisional government under General Alexis Nord at Limbe, capturing General Nord's cannons and munitions of war.

Many of General Nord's soldiers were killed and a great number taken prisoners. General Salnav continues his march on Cape Haytien, an attack on which is shortly expected.

The gunboat Crete-a-Pierrot, which is in the Firminist service, departed troops yesterday and at night in various places near the city, and cruised around outside the harbor. The residents are much frightened, fearing a bombardment of the town, but the foreign colony is calm, thanks to the protection afforded by the presence of the United States gunboat Mackias, Commander McCrea having taken all measures necessary to protect as much as possible the lives and property of foreigners here.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Navy department this morning received the following cablegram from Commander McCrea of the gunboat Mackias, dated Cape Haytien, August 9:

"Haytian gunboat landed force Cape Haytien, on Friday afternoon. An engagement is hourly expected. Will be ready to land."

Commander McCrea is under general instructions to protect American interests and in addition, to prevent the cutting of the cable of the United States and Haytian company. This is not a French company, as referred to yesterday, but is clearly an American company, and part of the Commercial Cable company's system.

Commander McCrea has confined himself strictly to that mission and will not take sides either for or against the de facto government. Great confidence is reposed in the cool-headedness of Commander McCrea, and no rash instructions were considered necessary. Mackias has a complement of about 130 men, including a marine guard of twelve, and could land a force of about fifty men all told.

A Colt rapid-fire gun which it has shared could be sent ashore with a landing party. Mackias has eight 4-inch guns in his main battery, four 5-pounders and two 1-pounders in its secondary battery, all rapid-fire, and under the threat of these guns it is quite unlikely that either the Haytian gunboat or General Firmin's force ashore would care to make an issue.

Acting secretary of the Navy Darling today sent the following cablegram to Commander McCrea of Mackay:

Your actions are approved. Cutting cable or interference with other than Haytian telegrams not to be permitted. SINGER MAKES A HIT WITH KING

Sybil Sanderson Actually "Thrills" the Ruler of the Greeks.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) PARIS, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—King George has just heard the only singer who has ever really "thrilled" his soul, according to his own way of putting it. General Porter, the United States ambassador to France, was walking one day with Miss Sybil Sanderson, the opera prima donna, at Aix-les-Bains. During the walk the king and the ambassador introduced the American song bird to the monarch. The three walked back to the hotel Splendide, the king being greatly interested in the beautiful woman's conversation.

While the king was talking at the hotel he began to rain hard. The king remarked that it was a gloomy day and suggested that it would be charitable for the lady to help him away after the afternoon. Miss Sanderson sang. Both the king and the ambassador were delighted and the sovereign of Greece expressed his admiration in such glowing and frank terms that the singer was actually embarrassed. Afterwards the king "commanded"—which is the royal way of giving an invitation—Miss Sanderson to dine with him.

ALL FOR THE LOVE OF A GIRL

Talented Young Austrian Commits Suicide on Account of Disappointed Love.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) VIENNA, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—Society here has been shocked by the tidings of the pathetic death near Toblach, in the Austrian Tyrol, of Victor Christ, an extremely talented and handsome young musician and artist, under circumstances so striking that he had gone to Karersee hotel at Toblach for a holiday. There he met a party of artists, including a very beautiful American girl, Miss Maxwell.

Victor fell desperately in love with her, but at the end of a week there was an explanation which left him terribly dejected. The next day Miss Maxwell went away. Victor scarcely spoke for three days. Then he arranged to join an American named Ernest von Sachs and an Austrian officer on a climb. While they were going up the mountain he advanced to the edge of an overhanging ledge, not heeding the warning of the guides, and disappeared. His companions are satisfied that he threw himself overboard.

Deep sympathy is felt for Victor's family, as he was very popular and gave great promise for the future.

BALLOONING A STRONG TONIC

French Savant Asserts One Trip is Better Than Month in the Mountains.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) PARIS, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—Dr. Naugier asserted at the latest meeting of the Academy of Medicine that experiments he has made demonstrate that a balloon ascension is more beneficial to an invalid than a month in the mountains. He declared, citing an astonishing multiplication of the red corpuscles in the blood, and that condition persists for ten days after an ascension.

Five such ascensions, he asserted, are more beneficial to an invalid than a month in the mountains. Dr. Naugier believes that the good effect begins to be felt immediately and that a lengthened stay in the air is only detrimental in causing nervous irritability and is not a tonic.

The municipal council will be asked to provide a large balloon, one capable of taking up in the upper air daily fifty patients, of children who are too poor to afford a change of climate.

The students of the university are unanimous in considering that the theory that bovine tuberculosis is transmitted to man being, has already been demonstrated by the experiment of Dr. Gernaud, who inoculated himself in 1894 with the virus taken from an undoubted case of his system.

The students are hearing the results of experiments on mad dogs and will visit the authorities to issue pamphlets and post placards notifying the people throughout France that a post mortem should be made on all dogs that are not a conclusive way of ascertaining whether it is or was not rabid, and therefore bitten persons had better take the Pasteur treatment anyhow.

Dr. Brocas informed the academy that his experiments go to show that the mill of worms from one to five weeks after the birth of a calf contains nearly double the usual phosphates.

VANDERBILT NOT SATISFIED

His Ambition Now is to Drive an Automobile Eighty Miles in One Hour.

(Copyright, 1902, by Press Publishing Co.) PARIS, Aug. 9.—(New York World Telegram—Special Telegram.)—Sporting circles have been in a ferment since W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., smashed the automobile record for both a mile and a kilometer. The time for the mile was 43.3 seconds and for the kilometer 31.45 seconds. Vanderbilt's mile record of 31.45 seconds was made on Ocean Park way, New York, last November. Vanderbilt's kilometer record of 39.45 seconds, made at Nice last winter, had hitherto stood against the attacks of the best chauffeurs with the best machines.

The French automobilists, although somewhat annoyed by what they consider another defeat, following closely upon Edge securing the international cup and the 100-mile race in Belgium last week, heartily praise Mr. Vanderbilt's performance. His pluck, science and firmness have made him the strongest kind of a favorite here.

Mr. Vanderbilt said to the World correspondent yesterday at Trouville: "I shall not rest until I succeed in maintaining the same speed throughout one hour. Automobiles as now built ought to be able to travel eighty or ninety miles an hour, giving proper roads and proper handling. The trouble with chauffeurs is that their experience has not yet been sufficiently varied. Most of the breakdowns are from some mistake during the excitement, caused by high speed."

When I return I shall make every effort to break the American automobile club to adopt the kilometer instead of the mile for besides being much easier to measure, it would familiarize the people with its metric system and pave the way to its adoption throughout the United States as a whole."

IS MEAT COMBINE BREWING?

Hasty Return of E. A. Cudahy Starts Rumors of Coming Absorption or Consolidation.

Rumors are flying thick and fast about the packing houses at South Omaha that the much-talked-of combination of the big meat packers is gradually coming to a head. The men connected with these establishments, while naturally averse to talking on the subject for publication, think they see signs of an approaching change in the ownership if not in the management of the meat packing concerns, and their apprehension was quickened yesterday by receipt of a telegram from E. A. Cudahy, saying he would return to Omaha this morning. Mr. Cudahy had left last week for his summer home at Mackinac, to be gone two or three weeks, and his hasty return at this time is explained on the theory that his personal presence is necessary for some step in proposed negotiations for the absorption of the Cudahy plant into some consolidated corporation.

ATTORNEYS HOLD CONFERENCE

Head and Post Meets and Discusses Famous Kansas-Colorado Irrigation Suit.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 9.—Elwood Mead and Attorney General Post had a conference today over the Kansas-Colorado irrigation suit. "We reached no conclusion," said the attorney general. "Mr. Mead is merely here to investigate conditions regarding water rights along the Arkansas river. He has no authority to dismiss the suit, but after he investigates he may make suggestions regarding the case and give his opinion, perhaps, on whether Kansas has a case or not. If the suit is to be dismissed Kansas people must make the motion. We can do nothing except acquiesce."

On Tuesday next there will be another conference in regard to the case. The Colorado attorneys interested, state officials and irrigation experts will attend. Mr. Mead is expected to give his views on the subject then.

REPORT BOGUS HARRY TRACY

Man Claiming to Be Real Bandit Hiding Up Farmers in Washington.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 9.—A bogus Harry Tracy is reported to be holding up farmers in the southern part of this county. Reports to the Chronicle state that on Wednesday evening, the day after the bandit's death, a man armed with a rifle and two revolvers rode up to the farm of M. B. Gilliam, near Medical Lake. He declared he was Tracy and called for something to eat. He is said to have done some remarkable shooting, saying: "If you don't believe I am Tracy, I'll show you."

CLODBURST IN ILLINOIS

Heavy Downpour of Water in McLean County Washes Out Railroad Tracks.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Aug. 9.—A cloudburst and appalling electrical storm struck McLean county tonight. Two inches of rain fell in less than an hour through the greater part of the county. The Lake Erie & Western railroad is tied up indefinitely, a long stretch of the track ten miles east of here now being in the mortgaged condition of the road.

FIND ANOTHER BODY

Remains of Mrs. Bartholin Discovered Beneath Cellar Floor of Her Home.

PARTY OF NEWSPAPER MEN MAKE FIND

Cement Floor Had Been Raised and Body of Woman Carefully Hid.

MISSING SON BELIEVED TO BE GUILTY

Felice Think He Murdered His Mother and Later Killed Miss Mitchell.

BODY ALMOST NUDE WHEN FOUND

Wound in the Head and Feet that Young Bartholin Was Last Seen with Miss Mitchell Strang.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—With a jagged wound in the left temple and physical evidence that she had been strangled or smothered, the almost nude body of Mrs. Annie Bartholin was found this evening buried beneath the cellar floor of the house in which she had lived at 4316 Calumet avenue.

Coincident with the finding of the body, the police redoubled their efforts to find the missing son, William Bartholin, who is also suspected of the murder of Miss Minnie Mitchell, whose body was found in a vacant lot at Seventy-fourth and State streets last Thursday evening.

The police have evidence that Bartholin slept in the house on Calumet avenue last Tuesday night, three weeks after his mother had been murdered and six days after he is supposed to have killed Miss Mitchell.

The body of Mrs. Bartholin was found by a party of newspaper men, after the police had searched the house and had concluded that if the woman had been murdered, her body was concealed somewhere away from the residence. All the rooms of the house had been ransacked, partitions torn down, walls sounded and the basement and the premises searched.

Earlier in the day persons who were searching in the basement found a place where the cement floor seemed to have been disturbed. Digging there they found what was at first supposed to be fragments of a human body. Later they became satisfied that a dog had been buried there. A hatchet which bore dark marks were found in the basement and the searchers were unwilling to abandon their task even after it was found there was nothing further for them to do.

Body of Woman is Found.

Finally tonight someone found a small piece in the cement floor, indicating that the body had been disturbed and then skillfully patched. In a moment the men were attacking the floor with picks and spades, while a large crowd of neighbors and other curious ones watched the work from the stairway or through the basement windows. The cement was quickly broken away and the body was found. It was wrapped in a blanket and practically was hidden from view, being only a stocking on the left foot and a corset cover around the chest.

From the appearance of the body it was believed that Mrs. Bartholin was struck down either while drowsing for the night or when dressing in the morning.

On the woman's left temple was a deep and ragged gash two inches long, but Dr. E. P. Fogarty, a physician who has examined the body in his opinion it could not have caused death.

"The wound is superficial, but may have served to render the victim unconscious," Dr. Fogarty said. "After the blow was struck the woman was either choked or smothered."

The body was removed to an undertaking establishment where the coroner's inquest will be held on Monday.

Thanks Bartholin Alive.

The police have abandoned the theory that Bartholin is dead and Police Inspector Hunt, in whose district is the home of Mrs. Bartholin, declared tonight that he was confident that the man is alive and has not left Chicago. The clerk of a real estate office on the property of Mrs. Bartholin, not the name of the man, but he does not remember which. This fact causes the police to believe that they will capture him soon, as he has had less than one week's start of them.

Today a man was killed by cars at South Chicago and another committed suicide at Washington Heights. Both, in a general way, answered the description of Bartholin, but both proved to be other men. Neither death had any connection with the Bartholin case. There is no apparent motive for the killing of Mrs. Bartholin or of Minnie Mitchell, but the police are following every possible theory. The one that finds most favor at present is that the young man, being in debt, killed his mother in order that her equity in the mortgaged property might revert to him. While this theory will not cover the murder of the Mitchell girl in any way, the police believe that Bartholin had the idea that she either suspected him of killing his mother or that she had taken him to task for telling conflicting stories regarding her disappearance.

Bartholin and his mother were not on good terms, although they lived in the same home. Beyond a desire to inherit her property there is at present no known motive for the murder.

Dr. Springer, the coroner's physician, conducted an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Bartholin tonight and announced that her death had been caused by strangulation, the assassin having made sure of his victim by first breaking her skull with a blunt instrument, a fracture having been found beneath the wound on the temple.
