Rev. Conley Says that People Must Work to Serve God.

HELP TO BUILD CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY

Preacher Declares it the Duty of Every Man to Take an Active Part in Politics for the Public Good.

"There is a great deal of talk about serving God and surrendering ourselves to Him," said Rev. J. W. Conley at the First Baptist church Sunday morning.

Rev. Conley's sermon was on the text "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." He said that religion is not a matter of mere words.

"In seeking the Kingdom of God, we must first learn to serve. Seek rather to serve than to be served. Seek rather to be a servant than a master."

ON THE MESSAGE ON MARS HILL

Discusses of Rev. Clinton Douglas at First Congregational.

"Here in the United States are men of every race; men of every religion and of every color; men of every color, red and black and white and yellow; men who are poorest of the poor; men who are richest of the rich; men who are among the wisest in the world, and some who are among the most ignorant."

"This domestic application was drawn by Rev. Clinton Douglas of Albion, Neb., at the First Congregational church Sunday morning in his sermon on 'The Message on Mars Hill.'"

"But, once there, Paul knew how to utilize his chance in the right way. He did not abuse, nor was he intolerant. He merely brought Christ and the resurrection plainly before the people."

FATAL MOTOR CAR ACCIDENT

A. J. St. John Killed in Collision at Thirtieth and Marcy Streets.

SWITCH ENGINE CRASHES INTO CAR

Fireman Signals to Go Ahead—Victim Employed as Traveling Salesman for the Cudahy Packing Company.

A. J. St. John was caught between the step of a motor car and the running board of a Union Pacific switch engine at 2:35 Sunday afternoon and the life was crushed out of him. The engine backed into the motor car as the latter was crossing the tracks and struck it on the side near the rear end.

The accident occurred at Thirtieth and Marcy streets, north of the viaduct. Motor car No. 145, in charge of Conductor L. P. Cook and Motorman Charles Stitt, was going south. The switch engine, No. 158, in charge of J. B. St. John, engineer, and John Clark, fireman, was backing north.

The injured man was picked up and taken to the switchhouse, and Police Surgeon Hahn called. He died, however, in a very few minutes.

At the time of the accident the fireman of the switch engine was on the lookout side, and John Featon, the flagman, said that as the engine began to back he called to the fireman to stop, but the latter did not look around. The motor car was only slightly damaged, a section of the boiler being torn away. It was knocked from the track, but was righted without much difficulty.

Other Passengers Uninjured.

At the time of the accident only a few passengers were aboard. In the seat behind St. John were two women and a girl. Neither of these or any of the other passengers left the car until after the collision, and was injured.

A. J. St. John was 26 years of age and was employed by the Cudahy Packing company as a traveling salesman. He was unmarried and resided at 2230 South Twelfth street with his mother and two brothers. His father is at present in Michigan. Mrs. St. John was at home alone when she received news of her son's death, and was almost prostrated with grief.

SELLS HORSES NOW IN JAIL

Fraisenet Acquires Title to Team by Advertising it as Lost.

Alfred Fraisenet is in the city jail because it is alleged, he sold two horses that did not belong to him and because he could not produce them when the owner came for them. The horses belonged to George Custer, who lives near Fort Omaha.

Last Sunday, according to the story Fraisenet told Detectives Drummy and Mitchell, who were investigating the case, Liverman McKnight, who resides at 425 Cuming street, came to his house after a horse which he was pasturing there. McKnight saw the other horse and wanted to buy it. He was given a history of the horse and after was given a bill of sale. After considerable argument, however, he convinced the youthful Fraisenet that the horses were his and he had a right to sell them. The deal was then closed.

The following day Mr. Custer, who had seen the advertisement in the paper, called for the horse, and failing to find them, he complained to the police. Officers acted upon McKnight and found where one of the animals had been sold. This one was recovered from J. Althouse and the other was recovered from Thomas Hill. Fraisenet was arrested Sunday afternoon and lodged in jail. He is 23 years old.

BRAKEMAN KILLED AT DEPOT

J. E. Hall of Fairbury, Neb., Found Dying on Platform Under Tenth Street Viaduct.

J. F. Hall, a Rock Island brakeman, was fatally injured at the Union station yesterday morning at 5:35 o'clock. He lived about an hour after the accident. Hall was one of the crew of Rock Island through freight No. 60, which comes into the freight yards from the west at 5:15. As the train slowed up Hall was seen lying about two car lengths east of the Tenth street viaduct on the brick pavement and his face covered with blood. The injured man was taken into the station and Dr. Smith summoned, who found that Hall's forehead had been crushed, his wrist fractured and that he had received internal injuries. He was put into the ambulance to be taken to St. Joseph's hospital, but died on the way.

It is not known exactly how Hall was injured, but the general opinion is that he was on top of one of the large freight cars and was killed by one of the girders of the viaduct. This Depot Master Simpson considers improbable; he thinks that Hall simply lost his footing and fell from the car. The dead brakeman lived in Fairbury, Neb., and leaves a wife and young daughter. He was about 35 years of age. The brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, of which deceased was a member, sent the remains to Fairbury by the 7 p. m. train, where interment will take place. Coroner Bralley and a jury viewed the remains and an inquest will be held Tuesday.

AMUSEMENTS.

At Krug's Park. Yesterday was a red-letter day for Krug park, when the biggest crowd of the season thronged the resort.

Bohemian Singers' Quartet.

The management of the Bohemian Singers' quartet of Prague had reason to congratulate itself upon the crowd which greeted them on their arrival at the Bohemian Turner hall, under the auspices of the Tel. Jed. Spolek, the more so because the concert was not announced until Tuesday and comparatively little advertising had been done.

The concert was sung almost exclusively, Bendi and Simons, being apparently the most popular. The program opened with the singing of "The Hymn of the Slave" by the quartet. The singers had to complete but one number to get on with the audience, and applause called them back. The first number showed the strength of the quartet. Antonia Mikolas has a voice clear and high without being metallic, a voice hard to duplicate in such an organization. The voice of the second tenor, Rudolf Cerny, while not so high as that of the leader, is wonderfully flexible. The baritone of Jan Novak is full and smooth. The tenor of Antonia Mikolas has a voice which will be heard in America often in the future. The best feature of the quartet is not, however, the individual voices, but the harmonious blending of all, which can be the result of nothing but constant training.

As the program was arranged, each soloist appeared once in addition to the singing of the quartet. Mr. Mikolas' appearance was in the second number, an aria from the opera "Dall'India." In this the range of his voice was demonstrated in a manner which brought forth calls for a second song. The second number, "O, How You Are Beautiful," brought forth an encore which was probably the hit of the evening, a medley of Bohemian national airs in which there was an imitation brass band accompaniment. This caught the crowd so well that a second call was made and responded to. The next number, "The Kiss," by Mikolas and Novak, was the fourth number on the program. The voice of Novak in this was heard for the first time in solo and was a revelation to the hearers, more than fulfilling the expectations derived from his work in the quartet. The first half of the program closed with "The Parting," by Backlik, sung by the quartet—that is it did on the program, but the results made the intermission shorter.

The second half of the program opened with "Dances of 'Ballers," a symphony in which was heard an imitation of guitar and banjo. In response to recalls twice again the quartet produced the imitation of the strangled instruments.

The second number was "Impromptu." The Trio of "Married Life," a composition by Rutie, sung by Antonia Mikolas. The song did not give the singer a chance to display his powers particularly, but it caught the audience and Mikolas was forced to return to respond to further recalls. The fifth number was "The Kiss," by Mikolas and Novak, which again the audience went wild until the singers came once more.

"How They Sing in Bohemia," was told as a baritone solo by Jan Novak, being a sentimental ballad of Bohemian life. He responded to recalls, which would not be killed until he appeared a third time.

The last number on the program was "The Farewell" and "Where is My Home," by Skrupa, the Bohemian national air, sung by the quartet.

The quartet will be at Krug's theater tonight and music lovers will certainly have a treat if they attend.
