Last Week the Busiest in a Long While for the Smart Folks of Omaha and Their Visitors.

There was a general quickening of Omaha's fashionable life last week that enwas really a great deal going on, that is, Mrs. Simon last summer. for this time of year, more in fact than had been chronicled for a whole month before. To begin with, people are beginning to come back to town again and in such numbers as promise to soon restore the long disorganized ranks of the fashionables and William Crain of Springfield, O., which make things possible. These home comings, Logether with the cool evenings, have ineed a number of informal indoor affairs. while the presence of several visiting girls has occasioned a number of afternoon affairs, luncheons and dinners of more or less sonsequence.

And then there was the Crain-Wakeloy wedding, an event in itself worthy the attention of society-even those who were not invited-because the bride chose to change her mind and have a home wedding instead of waiting until October, as was the original intention (according to the very few who knew anything about it before the engagement was announced), and closing her career as a leader of the smartest and most exclusive set with a wedding of the kind generally satisfactory to society. But then, it's a bride's privilege to change her mind, and of course, everybody can't be invited to a home wedding, so society has found some satisfaction in being able to contribute this charming young woman to Springfield's smart set, as it cannot keep her it-
