Seasonable Fashions.

Child's Apron 4215-Aprons that effectually cover and protect the frocks over which they are worn are essential to every child's wardrobe. This admirable one serves per-fectly the practical end and can be made plainer and more serviceable, dainty and more attractive as the material is white lawn or colored gingham. As shown it is of pale blue chambray and takes an intermediate place, but all apron materials are appropriate. The yoke is carefully shaped and is fitted by means of shoulder seams. The main portions are slightly circular and consist of front and backs that meet in undersrm seams. With these seams are included the portions of the belt that are buttoned over at the center back after the apron is closed. The sleeves are in bishop style with straight narrow cuffs and the neck is finished with a standing collar. On the front of the apron are placed two patch pockets that are a genuine convenience and certain to find
