CONDITION OF OMAHA'S TRADE

Volume of Business Transacted Last Month Largest on Record for August.

MARKETS IN GOOD, HEALTHY CONDITION

Dwing to Favorable Prospects for a bumper corn crop both jobbers and retailers look for successful Fall and Winter Trade.

Omaha jobbers and manufacturers in practically all lines report the volume of business for August as being far ahead of all previous records for that month. Not only that, but they also say that the outlook for the future is better than it ever has been before in this time of year. Merchants throughout the territory tributary to this market have had a large and prosperous business during the past several months, which puts them in good condition for the future. The excellent outlook for a large corn crop, with indications favorable for good prices for all kinds of farm products, is the real reason for merchants being so certain of a brisk fall and winter trade.

The advance orders that were placed during the month of August very plainly reflected the general situation existing throughout Omaha's territory and the general impression is that September will make even a better showing than August. Prices as a rule continue very firm, but comparatively few fluctuations have taken place during the week under review. There is a scarcity of many lines of goods, but as a general thing, with the exception of groceries, prices are not being advanced perceptibly on this account. There seems to be no doubt but what present prices will be maintained throughout the season, so that it who are posted as a safe proposition for merchants to stock up freely at present prices.

Coffee Took a Jump.

Wholesale grocers experienced a very lively demand last week, and in fact throughout the month of August, as comparisons with August warm weather show a gain for this year. The market as a whole is in very much the same position as it was a week ago. The coffee market in New York was rather excited owing to reports of killing frosts in Brazil. Prices jumped up 1/16c, but as the reports were not verified a weaker feeling developed.

There has been no change in sugar so far as quotations go, but the same time stocks are light and on some grades retailers are overstocked from ten days to two weeks. It is probable that the market probably will remain so for the next three or four weeks.

Means are a trifle firmer owing to unfavorable weather existing throughout the bean producing section, especially in New York and Michigan. It is reported that the rains have done a good deal of damage and that a large part of the crop will be discovered. In canned goods there has been little change so far as prices go. Jobbers, though, as well as retailers, are greatly interested in the tomato situation. Eastern advices indicate that the pack will be exceedingly light. The vines in the west are healthy, but unless weather becomes more propitious and the frost holds off the total pack will not be anything like an average, while an early frost will mean almost a failure. Many of the leading packers have so far refused to name prices.

Heavy Demand for Dry Goods.

The dry goods trade continues very large and in fact the Howard street houses were crowded to their capacity last week in earnest, and the number of merchants coming to market is a surprise to everyone. Their orders are very strong. There seems to be about as much activity in the trade as there are anticipating the best fall trade that they have ever experienced. The districts, including dress goods, cloaks, hosiery, underwear, blankets and woollens. There has been practically no change during the week in the price of leading staples, although the cotton goods market is very strong. There seems to be quite a scarcity in popular lines of fall wash fabrics, and domestic or desirable duster work are in short supply.

Wholesale milliners also had a nice trade last week, and many more customers arrived than were expected. Another big opening is advertised for this week, and even a larger attendance is expected than at the previous ones. Orders are very liberal and jobbers are more than pleased with the way business is going.

Hardware Hard to Get.

Wholesale hardware dealers are shipping out great quantities of fall goods, such as stoves, coal stoves, stove pipes, pipes, and in fact all kinds of fall goods are moving rapidly. The demand so far has been very heavy and jobbers report a big gain over last year. Goods seem to be about as hard to obtain as ever, and one reason for this is the fact that the unusually heavy demand owing to the fact that practically every mechanical or electrical contractor is employed, except where strikes are interfering with the regular course of work.

The market has shown no notable change during the week. Prices are firm all along the line, but no important changes are looked for in the immediate future.

Leather Goods Jobbers Also a Good Word to Say.

Leather goods jobbers also have a good word to say regarding the condition of the market and are buying quite freely. Most of them have, of course, bought the bulk of their goods, but at the same time they are placing liberal fill-in orders. Traveling men are also meeting with good success on the road, so that jobbers have no complaints to offer. They are still busy shipping out their advance orders, but they now have a good start on them.

Rubber Goods are Moving out at a Rapid Rate.

Rubber goods are moving out at a rapid rate, and so are the orders coming in freely for both footwear and clothing. The unusual amount of rain has made rubber goods sell readily and present indications are being exceptionally good. As a personal business this season.

Fruits and Produce.

The demand for fruit still continues very large and the supply is also liberal. The most of the peaches and plums offered in the market are of excellent quality. The week Colorado and Utah stock is expected to arrive in large quantities. According to advices received the quality will be fine. Prices ruled a little higher last week than the week before, but are now about the same as they were a week ago.

BURGLAR SHOOTS TO KILL

J. B. Mason Has Desperate Struggle with Robber in His House.

TIMELY STROKE PREVENTS A MURDER

Householder and Burglar, Fighting with Desperation, Roll Down Flight of Stairs—Murderer Makes His Escape.

J. B. Mason of 4967 Webster street, Dundee, had a desperate hand to hand struggle with a burglar who entered his house at 2 yesterday morning, during which three shots were fired from the burglar's revolver, and the two men, each desperately fighting to finish the other, rolled down a flight of stairs. Mr. Mason fought against heavy odds, as the burglar had the double advantage of being the heavier and stronger and being armed. The struggle undoubtedly would have ended in murder had not Mr. Mason's son appeared at a critical moment and knocked the revolver from the burglar's hand.

About 2 o'clock in the morning, during the thunder storm, Mr. Mason was aroused from his sleep by a noise at the kitchen door of his house. While he was lying in bed awaiting developments a flash of lightning illuminated the room and he saw a man there rifling his pockets. Mr. Mason jumped from the bed and seized the burglar.

Burglar Fires Revolver.

After scuffling for a few seconds the burglar drew his revolver and fired three shots in quick succession. Each time the gun was leveled at Mr. Mason's head, but each time he succeeded in striking the burglar's arm just before the trigger was pulled and the bullets flew into different parts of the room, one lodging in the mattress of the bed, in which Mr. Mason lay trembling and helplessly nervous. Mr. Mason fought the burglar with desperation, realizing that a moment's respite might bring a fatal shot from his adversary's gun. In the struggle both men went to the floor and then rolled, one over the other, down a flight of stairs. In the fall Mr. Mason sustained cuts about the head and a fracture of the ankle. He was now in a weakened condition, but his son Claude appeared on the scene and took a hand in the fight. The burglar was downed and given a severe beating, the revolver first having been knocked from his hand by the younger Mason.

Escapes in the Darkness.

The burglar, being a big and powerful man, finally succeeded in breaking away from the Masons and escaping through the back door. As he disappeared in the darkness he was joined by another man, who had apparently been waiting for him on the outside. The burglar got away with $1 which he had taken from Mr. Mason's pockets. The Omaha police are at work on the case, although the crime was committed outside the city limits.

Before entering the Mason home the burglar had visited the residence of Prof. Lighton, next door, but they secured no booty there.

Yesterday blood spots were discovered on the floor of the Mason house, and these indicate that the burglar may have been struck by one of the bullets from his own gun.

IRELAND TO GET RED HAT

Increased Number of Catholics in United States Entitles Church to Another Cardinal.

ROME, Aug. 30.—In view of the increase of Catholics in the United States the pope has decided to create another American cardinal in order to re-establish the equilibrium in the sacred college.

It has been pointed out to him that whereas Great Britain and Ireland, with 6,000,000 Catholics, have two representatives, and even Australia, with hardly 1,000,000, has a cardinal, Moran, 13,000,000 American Catholics have only one cardinal (Gibbons). It is certain that Archbishop Ireland will get the red hat.

BRIDGE REPORT IS ADOPTED

County Commissioners Seal One Chapter of Old Board's Record.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED DOLLARS SAVED

Commissioner Appointed to Investigate Recommends a Reduction of Final Estimate and This is at Last Agreed To.

Acting upon the report of the special commission appointed to investigate the matter of the bridge on the asylum road, the county commissioners, after some heated discussion, determined to deduct $1,808 from the estimates as submitted by the contractor, Robert Z. Drake.

It was disclosed in the discussion that the first and second estimates, amounting to $2,500 each, had not yet been allowed and it was decided to deduct the amount named from the second estimate.

The report, which is signed by Robert B. Howell, W. S. King and F. A. Edquist as commissioners, relates in a specific manner that the commission had examined each of the different records forming portions of the proceedings of the board in relation to this bridge and after stating in a general way that the price was practically in accordance with the terms agreed upon, proceeds as follows:

"We further find that under such contract of July 15, 1900, and the prices therein set forth to be charged and allowed for bridge material and bridge work, and under the order and resolution of June 24, 1901, and July 13, 1901, respectively, and the modified plans and specifications as accepted July 31, 1901, that the correct price allowable to said Robert Drake on such bridge is as follows, viz:

Table with 2 columns: Description and Amount. Total $12,114.26

Debate on the Report.

Commissioner Ostrom moved the acceptance of the report, stating that the final estimate for the work had been allowed, but that the first and second estimates of $2,500 each had been withheld and embodying in his motion a provision that the sum of $1,808, which was the difference between the reasonable cost of the bridge as fixed by the commission and the cost as shown in the contractor's estimate, be deducted from the final estimate.

INVESTORS COMBINE CAPITAL.

Pooling Their Interests, They Form an Enormous and Powerful Syndicate.

One of the new moves in the financial world that is attracting a great deal of attention is the pooling of interests by small investors. A St. Louis firm, the Prudential Investment Co., is the prime mover in the plan. This company receives the money of thousands of small investors, and combines it into a large fund. It then invests them to successfully transact enormous deals that pay handsome profits to the individual members of the company. It is a new phase of the Community-of-Interest plan, the only difference is that this company is composed of an unlimited number of small investors, while Mr. Morgan's company is composed of a limited number of individuals. The Prudential plan is the first such company organized on this new plan, but because of its wonderful success it is but a question of a short time until many more will enter the field. It is a well known fact that the most money has thousands of opportunities to make profitable investments that never come to the man of small means. In popular language, "It takes money to make money." By this new plan of combining the small investor secures the same opportunities that come to the man of millions and as a consequence realizes the same enormous per cent of profit on his investment, however small it may be. It can be safely said that a more marked departure than this new plan has never made in the world of money and that means it is a real money-maker. It takes more money on their money in a week than they would under ordinary conditions in a year. The Prudential Investment Co. is rapidly extending its field of operation, and to arouse additional interest, has issued a booklet explaining in detail its plan of operation. This booklet is sent free to who write for it. Address: Prudential Investment Co., 24 Fozzoni Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

At the Threshold of Fall A Pen Picture of the Autumn Season.

The perceptible transition from summer to autumn moves the Springfield (Mass.) Republican to draw the following pen picture of nature's glorious season: Before the gray winds come and the birds go; while yet buckwheat bloom is sweet to the bees and the rising sun awakens symphonies on the bosom of the misty pond; while yet the fields are fragrant with rosen clover, and the grouse and the wood hen clack to their late broods in the hazel thickets; while the lush greens of summer still possess the fields and crown the hills with sumptuous repose in the long day-in short, just now, before we forget our blessings in a possible hot and steaming September, let us give grateful praise to the uncommon loveliness of the season. Not the best of corn weather, but for sheer physical comfort and joy in breathing quite the best, especially in the midsummer weeks, wherein the dog-star usually rages, the mosquito revels, and sleep becomes a fitful and wearisome uncertainty. A good many rainy days, and many more days of fresh showers, some of them notable and furious, have given to the foliage of the trees and the herbage of the meadows those luscious perfections of verdure which they wear so happily. Other days have intervened, keen with reacting air currents, brilliant with clear, swift sunshine and with glowing white clouds drifting over profound azure depths of sky. How the earth has felt the luxury of its vegetable life, how flowered and leaved in marvelous gayety and profusion, how sent forth new swaying sprays from the tip boughs of birches and cedars, hemlocks and pines, and sung forth, as in child's play, the delicate tender red leaves of spring from the bush roses and the plum trees. Nay, spring hues and fall tints have even balanced each other on the forecasting joined together in the happy unity of the year's advance.

And now that the later and more splendid of the golden rods are beginning to glorify the plains and gleam in the bush rows between the fields, the aster tribes are beginning their royal succession in the plains begins to assume that Maderia wine tinge that gives its tone to many an acre. Besides these there are the sunnys, beginning to intimate the riot of leaf color to come, while their scarlet or crimson pom-poms break upon the sight like fantastic triumphal decorations of the march of the host of the outgoing year.

And so it shall be. Praise be to God, and joy to man, that there is an unending chorus of life in the earth-life that was as the dew distilled and the sun dissolved them ages ago, and life that will be to the end. We make our farewell, and others shall know, and also they shall take a last look with earthly eyes upon these works of God, and go on to discover and dwell among other of His works, as good and as beautiful. Or rather, go on into the wider life of God, in which we are but motes and all that we behold and enjoy and love but shadows of glorify the plains and gleam in the bush rows between the fields, the aster tribes; and the thatch that abounds on our
