stretch covered with short turf and forming a pleasant ground for a morning's canter, but at next Christmastide it will be covered with the snowy camps of the viceroy of India and his principal lieutenants and adjutors, and will be resplendant with the bright eastern surroundings by which such camps are always framed.

The viceregal camp will be in the center of all, flanked on the south by the camps of the governor of Bombay and of the comander-in-chief of India and the generals of the four commands, and on the north by those of the governor of Madras. and the lieutenant governors, chief commissions and adjutants to the governor general throughout India.

At the back of the central camp is being constructed a permanent residence for the viceroy's occupation. This will hereafter fill a much needed want at Delhi, viz., guest house for distinguished officials and visitors.

The press camp will be on the left of the state camps and one visitors' camp on the right, while another will be outside the Kashmir gate of the city.

All the camps and the Durbar plain will be connected by the light railway, which is being constructed for the convenience of visitors. All of it will be illuminated by electric lights.

Not far from the center of the parade ground, to the south of the Grand Trunk road and close to the site of the viceregal camp, is the dark cluster of trees which marks the last resting place of Sir Henry Barnard and the many men who fell before Delhi, upholding the cause of their queen. Later the police arrested James Perkins, John Spellman, 1834 Nicholas street; Jack McKenna, 1101 North Eighteenth: Bert Mitchell and John Gordon on suspicion of being connected with the assault which resulted in the death of Caldwell.

Frank Carrigan was brought in after the others and, when being searched at the city jail, was detected trying to hide 'a pair of brass knuckles.

Ball, who was with Caldwell when the assault was committed, was brought up and identified McKenna, Spellman and Carrigan as being among the assailants.
