DANGER IN POISON IVY. How to Know the Plant-Simple Rem-

In speaking the other day of the trip to the Pacific coast made by President Mc-Kinley, says the New York Tribune, a Californian said that several members of the party were made extremely uncom fortable at Santa Cruz because they touched the poison byy on some of the big trees. "If one knows how the Rhus toxicoden dron-that is the scientific name for the ivy-looks," said the man of the woods "he can avoid it with ease. It is some times a low shrub about a foot high and it is also a graceful vine, with stout hairy stems. This vine sends out horldo not look alike, but both have coarse toothed oval pointed leaves. These are always three in a group and at this season
