

WAYS OF MERCER CAMPAIGN

Feeling Discontent from Custom Proves Disappointing and Discouraging.

SUNDAY PARTY IN THE SYRIAN COLONY

Attendance Falls to Come Up to Guy's Expectation and Affairs Therefore Close Early—Mercer Prodigal with Beer.

A sample of the Mercer campaign methods came to light yesterday, although careful effort was made to keep it under cover. It was a Sunday political entertainment prepared by Will Gurley, and was designed to get voters in the Syrian colony in line for the non-resident candidate for congress. Although the entertainment was given at the home of Elias Mina, the husband of the woman, Bader Mina, who was charged with being implicated in the murder of Najeeb Saily and who was defended in court by Mr. Gurley, the real host was D. H. Mercer. Keg beer, Syrian candy, sweet cookies and cigars of the alleged value of 15 cents were the refreshments. The Syrians had been led to believe that Herman Kountze, who furnished Mrs. Mina's bond, was to be present. But in this they were disappointed. Instead, A. C. Harris, chairman of the finance committee of the Board of County Commissioners, was present.

By the same suave argument that induced Elias to give up $1,500 for legal services last winter, Mr. Gurley convinced him a few days ago that to have the Syrian-born congressman cross his threshold would be to place himself in the favor of the gods for all time and the unlettered Mina proceeded to rustle hard for a full attendance of the Syrian voters of the Second and First wards. But the result was diametrically and disastrously disappointing. There were just eight bona fide Syrians present and only two others of voting age, one of whom was Mina's next door neighbor.

Mercer and Gurley left the car at Thirteenth and William streets, two blocks from the house, for reasons best known to themselves, and walked the rest of the way. A crowd of Syrians stood not far from the house and smiled as they recognized the pair, but failed to follow on. Mina was visibly annoyed, for there was only one explanation of his countrymen's conduct, and that reason was one that he couldn't very well give without hurting the feelings of the non-resident from Washington. Besides, the $3.50 keg of amber brew was hard to keep from souring and the candied elephants and camels were already beginning to melt. It being Sunday, and some of his neighbors being of pious inclination, both the beer and the county commissioner had been smuggled up the back stairs.

Mr. Gurley towed the hesitating Mr. Mercer up to the Mina front door at exactly 4:45, which was just forty-eight minutes behind schedule time. The anxious host and hostess, with four babies and a sister-in-law, had been hovering uneasily at the front door of their home, 1423 South Thirteenth street, a few feet from the scene of the murder, for fully thirty minutes.

Mr. Gurley removed his hat and bowed. Mr. Mercer, feeling called upon to do a little better, bowed also and said: "Allah, whoopalla," the same being the best he could do in the way of Syrian salutation. Mina looked puzzled and responded in English. Then Mr. Mercer "spied" the babies and of course the rest was smooth sailing.

The party was to have continued into the evening, but when the politicians sized up the little crowd in Mina's apartment and the little crowd sized up the politicians the situation became embarrassing and the visitors soon began to leave. By 6 o'clock the function had passed into history, recorded as another of Mr. Gurley's master strokes as a campaigner.

"Have some beer on Mercer." That cheerful slogan has been working overtime during the past week, and it will not be permitted to rest until after sundown next Friday night, when the last of the ballots are cast at the primary election. Devoid of argument, without the ability to discuss congressional affairs, with the majority of thinking republicans disgusted with his long buncie game, and with the desperation of a drowning man, the non-resident candidate has turned to beer as a campaign measure. A keg of beer here and a keg of beer there, in some places where it is called for and other places where it is not, is expected to make the recipients think that Mercer is "a good fellow" to vote for, and therefore the amber fluid is being sent out freely every day by the managers of the Mercer campaign.

Saturday a keg of beer was sent to the workmen at the Willow Springs distillery "with the compliments of Dave Mercer." Some of the men drank the beer, but none reflected that he tasted anything in it like a favorable argument for a candidate for congress. Most any place that David sends a keg of beer will provide the men to drink it, for at every turn of the road there are men who are glad enough to drink up a little corporation money, although the message that accompanies the keg reads, "With the compliments of Dave Mercer." It's a dull man who doesn't read between the lines. "With the compliments of the Union Pacific Railroad company."

"I happened in at a Mercer beer-fest the other evening," related a Second ward democrat the other day. "Of course, the fact that I'm pretty well known among my neighbors as a democrat didn't lose me any credentials at that party. It was free beer, and everybody was called in to have a drink on Dave Mercer. Among the republicans there I noticed quite a number who are even out working against Mercer. It doesn't look to me as if the republicans in the Second ward are as ready to swallow Mercer as they are his beer."

The resourceful methods of Mr. Mercer are illustrated by the fact that the general manager of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing company at St. Louis has requested his agent in Omaha to give the non-resident congressman all the support he can and contribute liberally to the sines of war.

The interests behind Mercer have succeeded in pressing several bankers of Omaha into the Mercer service. It is reported that Herman Kountze is to head the Mercer delegation in the First ward, and it is settled that M. F. Barlow, president of the United States National bank, will be on the Mercer ticket in the Eighth ward.

Another indication that Mercer realizes the strength of the opposition is furnished by the fact that he has enlisted the packing house and stock yards managers of South Omaha to come to his rescue. Frank Lee, assistant superintendent at Armour's, has been commissioned chief quartermaster and chief paymaster for the stock yards district, and the first move he made was to engage all the horse and horseless vehicles in the Magic City for primary day. It has been given out that the employees at the packing houses and stock yards are to be driven to the polls with instructions to vote for Mercer, the design being to capture the primaries by main force. A great rumbling of wheels is anticipated, but what the men will do when they get to the voting places may not be according to the plans of their taskmasters.

It is a safe bet that Dave Mercer never worked harder in his life than he is working just now. His usual "jolly" pursuit, such as shaking hands and kissing babies, is being slightly modified because he finds it necessary to devote considerable of his time to his so-called literary bureau. Autograph letters are being played for first, second and third places. They are being sent to some of the judges of the primaries—these letters being desperate appeals for help. Then Mercer has written to a number of other citizens, begging them for support and promising, with a prodigious hand, to give them positions and pensions in the future. Mercer, as many republicans of this district have long since found out, is a great man to play on the future and always long on promises.

Still Keeps It Up.

"During a period of poor health some time ago I got a trial bottle of DeWitt's Little Early Rider," says Justice of the Peace Adam Shook of New Lisbon, Ind. "I took them and they did me so much good I have used them ever since." Safe, reliable and gentle, DeWitt's Little Early Riders neither gripe nor distress, but stimulate the liver and promote regular and easy action of the bowels.

NEBRASKA LABOR CONVENTION

Annual Meeting of Society of Labor and Industry Next Month.

The annual meeting of the Nebraska Society of Labor and Industry has been called to meet at South Omaha October 2. It was the intention to have held the sessions during the Ak-Sar-Ben week, but when the executive committee came together to issue the call the members found that several of the unions would not meet until the first week in October, and therefore could not elect delegates to the convention, which was therefore called for the second week in that month.

The society will be composed of delegates from each local union in the state, and will be called for purely political action, this being the only political action taken by the unions. But Ruth was elected secretary of the society temporarily, as both the secretary and assistant secretary have removed from the state. W. H. Bell, business agent of the Painters' union of this city, is president.

MUSHROOM CITY GROWS IN AN HOUR

Sixty-Five Cars Bring It from York Sunday Morning and Six Hundred Men Rear Its Canvas Walls.

A mushroom city has sprung up at Twentieth and Paul streets and with it have sprung up, away up, the hopes and expectations of several thousand Nebraska children and several thousand other people who need to be cheered a long time ago. Within the boundaries of this juvenile paradise are elephants, tigers, lions, gilded wagons, a callopie, chimes, clowns—oh, gee! so much that no kid could tell of it all. This morning there is to be a parade that won't cost anything and this afternoon there is to be a show that won't cost anything either if grandpa can be found. Tonight there is to be another show and then—only a vacant lot and a head full of glorious memories, a heart full of high aspirations and secret determinations.

About a Mile of Cars.

Sunday was well advanced when the great yellow wagon bearing the magic name, Ringling Brothers, began to roll from the cars at the foot of Davenport street. The last show point was York and the trains had come in slowly over the Burlington. The Ringlings have sixty-five cars for the equipment and an additional ten for the 300 performers, and such of the 100 members of the executive staff as are not in the three advertising cars that precede the show. There is also a night lunch car where the men may get a sandwich and coffee after the loading is done—a provision that was suggested by the management's desire to prevent the men losing out by night trips to the saloons of the cities visited.

Regiment of People.

There are 1,000 people with the show, 600 of whom are "razorbacks" or other general utility recruits. Of the 600 horses 218 are draft animals and these trotted briskly to the show grounds with the mammoth wagons yesterday forenoon as fast as the latter could be unloaded from the cars.

At the lot "Happy Jack" Snelling, boss canvasser, was ready and the colossal tents went up with a rush, not so marked as that which is necessary on week days when a performance is in immediate prospect, but fast enough to prove a spellbinder for the hundreds of Omahans who hovered about the grounds to see the work.

They're Looking Well.

Though the season is far advanced the circus properties are still resplendent and the show seems unusually well equipped this year. The Ringlings are established as a business institution and are at the head of the hippodrome list, but they are not, it appears, relying on reputation for business. The show is an even larger one than last year's and the parade at 9:30 this morning promises to be more entertaining if possible than its predecessors.

No Substitute Offered.

Say what you will about druggists offering something "just as good" because it pays a better profit, the fact still stands that ninety-nine out of a hundred who recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy when the best remedy for diarrhoea is asked for, and do so because they know it is the one remedy that can always be depended upon, even in the most severe and dangerous cases.

CIRCUS PERFORMER ROBBED

Acrobat Spends an Evening with Stranger and Wakes Up Loser.

C. R. Roth, an acrobat, who turns tricks for a living in Ringling brothers' circus, is out $100—and only one night in Omaha. Ada McVea is under arrest at the police station charged with doing the separating act. Roth met Ada, so he said, in South Omaha, and accompanied her to Omaha. The two spent the evening together and rounded up somewhere in the neighborhood of Sixteenth and Davenport streets, where Roth went to sleep. When he awoke, instead of finding Ada, he discovered a note, in which she said: "Meet me at South Omaha at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. I will explain why I left you and everything."

To ascertain the reason why she left him Roth did not have to keep the engagement, and by the emptiness of his purse he was certain she mislaid the facts when she said "I left you." He was $100 shy. Ada admitted writing the note, but denied that she had taken the money.

NEBRASKA GIRL IN THE CAST

Thais Magrane, Formerly of Lincoln, Has Leading Part in "Corianton."

Miss Thais Magrane, who is one of Mr. Haworth's leading ladies in "Corianton," is a native of Nebraska. She was born in Lincoln twenty years ago. Her father traveled for a Chicago wholesale house and at the early age of 7 years she left Lincoln with her parents and went to live in Chicago. From Chicago the family moved to St. Louis, where they now reside.

Miss Magrane, who is the guest of her uncle, Thomas Magrane of 2435 Seward street, is a beautiful brunette, tall and graceful with a wealth of dark hair and a smile that entrances a listener.

"I have been very successful so far in my stage career," she said. "In fact, I have not had the hard time, so far, that most people have who enter upon a stage career. I taught in the public schools of St. Louis for a year or two and then determined to adopt the profession of an actress. I went to New York and succeeded in getting into Mr. Belasco's company, where I soon played leading parts. The part I have in "Corianton" is more to my liking than any part I have ever played. This is my first visit to Nebraska in several years and I am greatly interested in everything I see. So far I have enjoyed myself and look forward to the coming week with pleasure."

Amusements.

At the Boyd.

Boyd's theater was packed last night, the occasion being the second performance of "A Millionaire Tramp." Standing room was at a premium, and several hundred were turned away at the box office. The gallery groaned under the applause of some 800 gods.

The play, which is by Lawrence Russell, is billed as a sensation and seemed to please the audience. Gus Mortimer played the role of Jay Pierpont, the millionaire tramp in a way acceptable to the audience, and F. C. Harris as a sort of village Pooh Bah drew a good deal of laughter. Miss Anna Tripp was pleasing in the role of the "leading lady," and Miss Fannie May acted the soubrette waitress in the conventional manner.

ANNOUNCES A TARDY ARREST

Telegram from Chicago Says Police Have Alexander Papiasnik in Custody.

Chief of Police Donahue has received a telegram from the Chicago authorities saying that they hold Alexander Papiasnik, a Poleander, who they believe to be wanted by the police in some of the towns of Nebraska for arson committed three years ago. Chief Donahue does not know of anyone so wanted, although there were incendiary fires in Wyomere and Beaver City about the time mentioned. The Polish church in this city was burned down during a controversy among the parishioners, but this happened about six years ago.

DEATH RECORD.

Robert Major.

Friends in Omaha have been apprised of the death of Robert Major, who occurred Saturday night in Chicago, N. C., where he went in August for his health. Grant post, Grand Army of the Republic, is taking steps to have the body brought to Omaha for burial.

Mr. Major will be remembered as the aged janitor at the postoffice, who lost his position through some misunderstanding with the government and went south, impoverished and dejected, to visit three bachelor brothers in Alabama. While there two years ago the brothers died and left him an amply fortune. He at once returned to his home in Omaha, where he was employed in the postoffice, but he was not satisfied with the position and went south, impoverished and dejected, to visit three bachelor brothers in Alabama.
