The miners have always been willing to arbitrate, as is evidenced by Mr. Mitchell's original proposition to leave the matter to a commission appointed by the president. Recognizing the serious situation of the general public, the operators have practically agreed upon the same thing. I am much pleased with the deliverance of the New York democracy on the tariff issue, and it was fitting and proper that the Empire state should sound the right note. meaning. In the light of such statements, then, can it be possible that the people of the United States, feeling the pressure of undoubted evils, are nevertheless totally powerless? Is it true that although they know with growing certainty the nature of the wrong and are seeking a remedy, the constitution as it stands does not permit them 10 pursue it; that amendment to that charter is first necessary; that the power of congress does not now extend over detriments injuring the entire body of citizens in their most vital concerns because these detriments originate in the states—although the states in the aggregate, and by the co-operation which is essential, do nothing effective to remove them? I do not believe that we find ourselves so helpless. When the currents of monopoly evil obviously flow out over state lines and cover the country, not only entering but largely filling the channels of interstate and foreign frade, it will not do to say that the evil is beyond the national reach, and that because the first step which must have a fixed situs within a state, the states alone may deal with it.

Congress Has Power. Conceding that the present law is not effective throughout the altuation, we come to the final alternative; May not congress, under the existing constitutional grants, amend and extend the law, and thus remedy its defects and so effectively regulate national and foreign commerce as to prevent the stiffing of competition, the regulating of out and price, and the restraining of national and international trade? If the answer to this question should be in the affirmative, a second question follows; How might congress so amend the present law? I do not scruple to say that in my judg-I do not scruple to say that in my judg-ment the more thoughtful mind reflects on the first question, the more unhesitat-ingly will an affirmative answer be returned.

The extent to which legislative control over commercial activities should be exercised is, of course, a question for legislative wisdom. We have the experience of the other nations to guide us in determinating how far the delicate and mysterous rules of trade can be interfered with by booftive statutes without injury. That experience teaches us that the least interference consistent with the preservation of essential rights should exist. Arbitrary ence consistent with the preservation of essential rights should exist. Arbitrary regulations that restrain free intercourse are usually found to be unwise.

Primarily it is for the congress to decide whether it has the power and whether and to what extent it will execute it—what character of restraints, whether all or those only which are unreasonable and injurious shall fall under the ban, whether legislation in the first instance should extend to all commerce or only to commerce in articles of vital importance to the people. The time never was when the English-speaking people permitted the articals necessary for their existence to be monopolized or controlled, and all devices to that end found condemnation in the body of their laws. The great English Judges pronounced that such manifestations of human avarice required no statute to decided that their uniangulations. pronounced that such manifestations of human avarice required no statute to de-clare their unlawfulness, that they were

It is difficult to improve upon the great unwritten code known as the common law? Under its salutary guaranties and restraints the English-speaking people have attained their wealth and power. It condemns monopoly, and contracts in restraint of trade as well. The calinction, however, between restraints that the responsible in between restraints that are responsible in view of all the circumstances and those which are unreasonable, is recognized an has been followed in this country by the

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 .- A comprehenive report in regard to the food question in Germany and the new meat inspection act was made public at the State department today. The report is from Consul Kohl at Stettin bearing date September 23 and says when the new law goes into effect on April 1 1903, microscopists, veterinary surgeons and chemists will be employed and many new buildings will be necessary, in all entailing a preparatory expense that gives the law a stamp of permanence. .The law provides that meat inspection of all prepared meats.

not due to crop fallures in 1900. From the United States alone the figures show 16,277 tons of prepared meats in 1901, as against 30,229 in 1900; 1,124,-602 tons of corn in 1901, as against 804,-234 tons in 1900, and 21,906 tons of rye in 1961, as against 38,444 tons in 1900, The consul closes his report by submitting interesting data showing a steady decrease in the aupply of live stock and a steady rise in the price of meats. Almost every city of more than 50,000 inhabitants, he says, has experienced an increase in the price of meats since January 1 and the laboring class are beginning to eat fish as a substitute.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 14.-Judge Hocksday opened court promptly at 8 o'cock and called the case of Colonel Ed Butler, the St. Louis millionaire politician, indicted on a charge of attempted bribery in connection with the city garbage contract, being tried here on a change of venue, but the defendant failed to appear. One of his attorneys looked for and found Butler still in his room at the hotel. Shortly after Butler appeared in court. Judge Chester Krum, for the defense, opened the argument on the demurrer. In supporting the demurrer to the Butler indictment the defense made its strongest argument against the validity of the garbage reduction contract, let by the Board of Health, members of which, Merrill and Chapman, the defendant is charged with attempting to bribe. Judge Krum concluded his argument at 10:15. Court took a recess for a few moments while awaiting the grand jurors summoned for this term of court. After charging this body the Butler case was resumed and Circuit Attorney Folk began his address against the demurrer. "The state's position," said Mr. Folk, "is, first, that the work of garbage reduction is not public work in the sense that is meant in the statute concerning the powers of the Board of Public improvements; second, the state holds that one charged with bribery of an official cannot defend himself on the ground of lack of authority on the part of that official. It is believed, says the consul, that the inspection will materially retard the importation of meats and he submits official statistics which reveal some interesting facts as to Germany's dependence on forcign food products. It is stated that the import of foodstuffs and live animals for food purposes into Germany for 1901 had a value of $461,769,930, or about one-third the value of the total importation, and showed an increase of 769,000 tons over similar importations during 1900.

It is pointed out that this increase was not due to crop failures in 1900.
