"It is easy to see that faith is not doctrinal, but personal. I believe that a man may be a Calvinist, a Universalist or of any faith and be a Christian; that he may be a speculative heterodox, theoretically orthodox, be 'off' in his 'upper story' and yet be all right here." And Rev. B. B. Tyler laid his hand upon his heart to make plain the significance of his last word.

MOTT'S APPEAL BRINGS MONEY

Omaha Men Pledge Themselves to Support a Missionary in the Asiatic Field.

As a material result of the young men's meeting at the First Methodist Episcopal church Sunday afternoon, 1,115 men contributed in cash or pledges for the purpose of sending a missionary to represent Omaha in the work of the Young Men's Christian association in the Asiatic field. The features of the meeting was an address by John H. Morrison, general secretary of the Young Men's Christian association, who was presented as coming from New York, but who is a native of Iowa and who, in the course of his work in the interest of the association has traveled three times around the world.

With Mr. Mott on the platform sat Fred L. Willis, general secretary of the local Young Men's Christian association, who conducted the exercises; Isaac Carpenter, president of the local association, and George F. Gilmore, chairman of the committee in charge of the meeting. Mr. Mott, pastor of St. Mary's Avenue Congregational church. Although the audience consisted entirely of men, the church was crowded beyond its seating capacity and it was estimated that more than 1,200 were present.

After the assemblage had united in singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" in a mighty male chorus that was truly inspiring and prayer had been offered by Rev. Dr. Yost, the Young Men's Christian association quartet sang "Rock of Ages." Mr. Willis then introduced Mr. Mott, who spoke of the great need of missionary work in all parts of Asia among the young men, of the work that has been done by the Young Men's Christian association and of the general situation in that continent as he has seen it. Mr. Mott, he said, in fact, presented as he presented by his startling and his manner of presenting them was earnest it was devoid of sensationalism.

In introducing the subject Mr. Mott said that the greatest water of the twentieth century would be Asia, and in that continent there were three principal nations which would shape its character and its destiny. First of these, he mentioned India as that which he had found most interesting because most mysterious; Japan, he said, had impressed him as the most brilliant of the nations of that world, a country which had accomplished more in the way of progress in one century than any other had in three centuries, a country which had been going to school to all of the others and learning from each of them. China he regarded as the strongest country of that world—not because of its numbers, although in that respect it certainly did lead, but because of the strength of its people, who possessed those characteristics which have ever marked the successful nations of the world. The Chinese, he said, were patient, frugal, industrious and independent, and the world's history showed those to be the qualities of the great nations.

The future of these countries, he said, would be determined by the young men, and as the young men should go, so would go the nations. There were in the Levant, he said, 10,000,000 young men; in the East Indies, some 30,000,000 more; in Japan, 10,000,000, with 9,000,000 more in Formosa, and in China and its dependencies, 50,000,000. He spoke of the temptations of these young men of those countries toward vice of all kinds, declaring that in comparison the people of the Christian countries did not realize what temptation was.

He spoke of gambling in China as a national vice, and of the great danger of intemperance in the use of liquor, and particularly of opium, in that country. It had been estimated by some of the more conservative statisticians that 15 per cent of the young men in China were addicted to the opium habit, and some placed it as high as 25 per cent. Of Japan, he said that in no other country of the entire world was the vice of social impurity made so attractive, so economical in practice or so prevalent. He had been told that in the language of that country there were 4,000 words expressive of the lower vices and passions, and but a small vocabulary to express the higher virtues.

The speaker said that the church missionaries in the Asiatic countries had appealed to the Young Men's Christian association some years ago to send secretaries to establish branches of the association, and in the last fifteen years thirty-one of these secretaries had been sent out and 300 Young Men's Christian associations had been established. It had been found best to use native missionaries for a greater number of the work among the people, but missionaries must be sent from the Christian countries to organize the work and conduct it. The international association, he said, wished to send out ten men this coming year—one to Havana, one to Manila and one to Japan, an assistant secretary to establish branches of the association, and in the last fifteen years thirty-one of these secretaries had been sent out and 300 Young Men's Christian associations had been established. Rev. Vawter of Des Moines. To a congregation that filled Immanuel Baptist church to the doors Rev. J. M. Vawter of Des Moines, Ia., discoursed yesterday morning on God's purpose and the necessity of morality, and what God would have him do for the benefit of the world. He urged his hearers to take God with them in their business life and on every perplexing question that should arise, to confer with Him through prayer and to abide by His teachings.

Rev. Vawter quoted the sixth verse of the ninth chapter of Acts, the words of Saul, who said: "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" and said we today could find the answer to that question in the New Testament. If it is studied for that purpose the student will no longer be in doubt as to God's purpose in his life.

to our joy only as we have walked with God. The things that we have done as Christ would want us to do them are the only memories that give us happiness. And when we have gone once to Jesus we love to go again and again, and the memory of the things done in His name give us everlasting joy. Heaven even will admit and give us joy as we ourselves have had part with the Master Builder in the building. When the redeemed come home we will shout with gladness only as we have had part in bringing them there."

Five Men Lose Their Positions on Account of Getting Too Frisky.

HASTINGS, Neb., Oct. 19.—(Special.)—Superintendent Kern of the Hastings asylum discharged five attendants this week for getting too frisky with the night watch. The regular night watch was away on his vacation and a new man was put on to make the rounds. Five attendants thought it would be a huge joke to play the new watch, so acting on the idea they turned their coats inside out, put on masks, armed themselves and lay in wait until the guard made his hourly round. At the proper time the night watchman was held up and disarmed, and then left to his misery, with his hands and feet bound. As soon as Superintendent Kern became familiar with the facts the five attendants were promptly discharged.

ELEVEN MEN DEAD IS PRESENT RECORD

Negroes Insult White Woman and Friends Resist Effort of Officers to Arrest the Culprits.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 19.—Three white men and eight negroes are reported to have been killed in a race riot at Littleton, Ala., a small town twenty-five miles southwest of this city, tonight. The number of wounded has not yet been ascertained.

A special train carrying Sheriff Andrew W. Burgin and ten deputies left for the scene of the riot at 11 o'clock tonight. The riot is said to have been caused by a crowd of negroes attacking a white woman who was passing over a railroad bridge enroute home from a visit to a neighbor.

As soon as the white citizens of the town learned of the incident they began the search for the woman's assailants. The negroes refused to deliver them and armed themselves to protect their leaders. When the posse arrived the negroes opened fire, killing three of the officers. The deputies returned the fire, killing eight negroes. Owing to the large number of negroes the posse was forced to retreat. The negroes are reported to be in complete possession of the town and have entrenched themselves. The negroes have captured a powder magazine, the property of a coal company, and are strongly fortified.
