

PLANS FOR NEW PLAY HOUSE

Old Trocadero Will Be Made Into Handsome Modern Theater. MAY COST FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS

Structure Will Be Heightened to Provide for Balcony and Gallery and More Space for the Stage.

"Fully $40,000 and possibly $50,000 will be expended on the structure," said William Krug in referring to the transformation of the old Trocadero theater into a modern, twentieth century house, which is to be under the management for a decade of Hudson & Judah Kansas City.

Workmen are now busily engaged in clearing away the old summer garden structures which adjoined the Trocadero and the tearing down process will soon begin on the theater building proper.

Mr. Krug says that while the building is in the hands of the lessees he is able to say that the new structure will lack nothing to make it a first-class and thoroughly equipped play house.

The entrance, therefore, will lead into the west side of the Auditorium, since the stage will be located where it is now, at the north end.

Another story will be added to the present building, thus giving room for a balcony, gallery and parquet.

The best in the world for Cuts, Corns, Boils, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum. Cures piles or no pay. 35c. For sale by Kuhn & Co.

Amusements.

"The Tide of Life" might be as appropriately called "The Tide of Death," more so perhaps, for while it brings life and happiness to only one or two of the people represented in the cast, it brings violence ending to all the rest, and narrow escapes from the grim reaper's clutches to everybody.

A FATAL MISTAKE

Is Often Made By the Wisest of Omaha People. It's a fatal mistake to neglect backache. Backache is the first symptom of kidney ills. Serious complications follow. Don't delay. Get them promptly. Don't delay. Until it becomes diabetes—Bright's disease. Read what an Omaha citizen says: Mrs. Kanute Thompson of 808 Douglas street, says: "It is nearly twenty years ago that I first had trouble with my back and kidneys, and in spite of all doctors and medicine could do, I gradually grew worse. There are very few people in my neighborhood who do not know how I suffered. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised I sent to Kuhn & Co.'s drug store for a box. After using it I found the pain in my back had passed away. I cannot use words strong enough to express my opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills after what they did for me when everything else had failed."

NEW BOOKS AND MAGAZINES

One of the Most Talked of Books is "Confessions of a Wife." JAPANESE GIRL WRITES OF AMERICAN LIFE. Herbert E. Hamblen Writes a Book Entitled "The Red Shirts," Which Tells of the Heroism of the Volunteer Firemen. One of the most talked of books this fall is "Confessions of a Wife," by the mysterious "Mary Adams," which has been appearing serially in the Century Magazine. It is written in the form of a diary and letters which tell the heart-and-soul story of Marna Trent, "Wilderness Girl" and deserted wife. The motif is the conduct toward each other of a high-strung wife (deserted by her husband) and of a physician who has long been in love with her, and who proves to be her mainstay in her almost unendurable situation.

"The American Diary of a Japanese Girl" is an interesting account of American life by Miss Morning Glory, whoever that is. A Japanese girl 18 years of age starts from Tokio, landing at San Francisco, where she declared if she was mayor she would build "free bath houses around the wharf" and that "it was no use to look beautiful in a cyclone city." The most of the journal is written in California. Some of her views of American manners and life are amusing. The impressions of the softness of American beds being that she was "exercising in her sleep," while because of the rush in the cities "the lazy halt of a moment on the street must have been regarded, I fancied, as a violation of law." She goes to New York, where because of the opportunities to study the households she accepts a position as parlor maid, assuring us her next diary will be "The Diary of a Parlor Maid." Published by Frederick A. Stokes company.

"The Queen of Little Barrymore Street" Gertrude Smith presents a bright and wholesome story for young girls in which family misfortune has proved a blessing in disguise. Alice is a girl of 12, who, with her mother, goes to visit a wealthy bachelor uncle, while her father is in New York about to sail for Australia. The uncle is absent in London when Alice arrives, but she is welcomed at his house by the young folks in Little Barrymore street, who knew her as their queen before they ever saw her. How it happened that she had so many friends in advance, how they formed a "Hexagon club," and so had good times together, how Alice was the generous uncle finally died and what became of the distressed father makes a lively story with a number of fine surprises. Above all, it teaches the beauty of true friendship. Published by Fleming H. Revell Co.

One of the handsomest books issued this fall is Leander S. Keyser's "Birds of the Rockies." It is not only beautifully printed, but is a valuable book to ornithologists and will undoubtedly be sought by them eagerly, as it is probably the best and most thorough publication ever printed treating of the birds and their habits in that section of our country. The book consists of a series of chapters detailing the incidents met by the author as he wandered about the mountains, fields and notebook in hand, and he describes the birds as he finds them in the course of these mildy adventurous excursions. Not the least valuable portion of the book is the check list in the last part of the book, where the author gives the names and local distribution of every sort of bird yet found inhabiting the state of Colorado. This includes the surprising number of 350 entries, 243 of which are known to breed there. Published by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"Through the Looking Glass," by Lewis Carroll, is a book full of illustrations that ingenious artist, Peter Newell. The frontispiece is a portrait of the artist, who is an imaginative little creature, while playing with the kitty, wonders what they would see if they could get through into "Looking Glass house," and before she is aware of the fact finds herself there, and her experiences and the queer little people she met comprise the book. Among her experiences she commenced shaking the queer little queen at a banquet, discovering that it was only a kitten, which she scolded soundly for purring so loud it awakened her. Mr. Newell's excellent pictures of Alice and her strange associates in this wonderful complete a book that makes a good gift book. Published by Harper & Brothers. "Children of the Frost," by Jack London, is a collection of short stories with subjects both fresh and entertaining. The children of the frost are the dwellers in the far north, Eskimos and Alaskans, primitive folk all of them with primitive passions. The stories are strongly conceived, vivid and real. Hitherto stories of these regions have been told from the point of view of the white man, the intruder, and these stories derive great interest from the fact that they are all told from the point of view of the Alaskan, Indian or the Eskimo. Macmillan company, publishers. A new volume of verse touching on various phases of life and different localities is "Poems," by Mary Olcott. Some of them have appeared at different times in the Bookman and Century Magazine. Published by John Lane. President Kruger's memoirs will be published by the Century company the latter part of November, simultaneously with its appearance in England, Germany, Holland and France. A reader of the manuscript in the Century office says: "It is a powerful defense of his entire political career—his defense of his reputation against the attacks of his enemies—his apologia pro vita sua. And never has such a defense been conducted with more vigor. It reveals the old lion of the Transvaal at bay. In a clear, unvarnished style, abounding in quiet sarcasm and humor, he aims blows at his English antagonists which have the force of a sledge hammer."
