Judge Gray asked the witness if his clety did not depend, after all, on the old economic truth that all great forces which Russians Successfully Break in on German tend to uplift and carry on social advancement and civilization depend upon the average desire of the individual to better his upon the desire of a man who has property to utilize it and get an income from it "I think that is true," was Mr. Mitchell's response. Judge Gray: "If you can imagine all men ceasing to work at once the whole social machine would stop,'

Mr. Mitchell said: "Yes." Commissioner Wright asked: "Do you consider it justifiable for the employers in a certain district, in order to resist the demands of the labor union, to paralyze that industry or any group of industries?" "No. I don't think it is proper."

Mitchell replied. Would the same answer be made if I should substitute unions instead of 'employers?

"I think in either case," replied Mr. Mitchell, "some other avenue of adjustment than paralyzation of the industry should be sought.

Mr. Mitchell, answering the commissioners, said the United Mine Workers did not incorporate because the step was not necessary. An organization financially responsible, he said, must have a large fund and this the working people did not have. He said that employers who objected to treating with the union because it was not incorporated would object to treating with it anyhow.

asked Mr. Commissioner Wright Mitchell what he meant by recognition of the union and the witness replied: "It means that employers shall make agreements regulating hours of labor, wages, etc., with the union and that the union as such would be held responsible for a rigid compliance with those agreements. The cross-examination was next taken up by W. W. Ross of New York, counsel of the Delaware, Lackawana & Western. Stop Miners Working.

"As a matter of fact," said Mr. Ross "your organization has stopped the miners working when the breakers were idle. Mr. Mitchell admitted that in one district this was so. This was for the purpose of preventing favoritism.

"You have spoken of favoritism," interjected Mr. Ross, "and of the excessive system of docking. Do they exist in our

to do here: we asked the operators to meet us and we agreed on an advance of 18 per cent and an eight hour day."

Being brought to the question of child labor, witness said he could not see any other reason for it than the fact that their parents required the money to live on. Certain of the Delaware men, he remarked sarcastically, visited Philadelphia once in twenty-four years and told their grandchildren of the trip as the great grandchildren of the trip as the great event in their lives. Here Mr. Ross took opeasion to say that the company owned only 284 houses, which were rented to the miners at an average of $5 a mouth, "So you see," he remarked, "we have not many houses for the number of employes, upward of 12,-

"You charge, enough for the ones you do have," was Mr. Mitchell's dry response, while the spectators laughed. Then they came to the question of profits and witness said the company paid a 25 per cent dividend.

"Is that not correct," inquired counsel. "I think that was it," said Mr. Mitchell "There are a good many methods for putting profits away in a railroad," he added. Replying to further inquiry he said there had been few failures of coal companies either in the anthracite or bituminous fields, although Mr. Ross contended that mining was a hazardous investment. Operators Must Discipline Men.

"What benefit is there?" asked the lawyer, coming to a new point, "to the miner in being paid by the ton instead of by the car?" "There has been general discontent among the miners because they are docked not only for impurities, but on account of the 'topping.' "You do not know," said Mr. Ross, "that it is necessary to discipline a man?" 'In that the reason," demanded the union president "for the impurities or for the fact the car did not have enough in it?" Answering Judge Gray, Mr. Mitchell admitted that about 10 per cent of the total production of authracite coal was put out on the weight basis.

The commission adjourned with Mr. Mitchell still on the stand.

imported mother seed, says:

It is impossible for men interested in the beet-sugar industry in the Unted States to attach too much importance to every phase of the seed question.

As is well knewn, most of the seed is imported, mainly from Germany and France, where specialists have for generations, through scientific methods of breeding and selection, succeeded in growing seed for beets with high sugar contents. But imported beet seed is expensive, and therefore efforts are being made in divers sugar-producing countries to grew the supplies needed at home. The suscess thus far has been rather indifferent, particularly in the United States, as I am informed. Even if the grower has all the scientific experience necessary and is fully equipped as to details, he still has many more difficulties (those originating from our soil and climate) to contend with than the toreign seed grower. Thus it is a well known fact that many kinds of high-grade seed will degenerate more rapidly in our country than elsewhere; but of late years considerable progress has been made in this direction, and there is every reason to expect that ere long American home-grown beet seed will reach the standard that has been attained by the growers in Germany and France.

desire to call attention to a method I desire to call attention to a method which has been employed by Russian growers of seed during recent seasons, and has proved very successful. They import German mother seed, from which they raise, in the course of two years, a crop of first-class beet seed with all the qualities of the original. In this way, it is said, they get the very best seed at haif the cost, Some of our beet-sugar people, may consider it worth while to see if good marketable beet seed can not also be grown in our own country from imported grown in our own country from imported mother seed.

grown in our own country from imported mother seed.

The process used in Russia is very simple. The mother seed is sown with a machine drill in rows that are ten to twelve inches apart, about twenty to thirty pounds to the acre. After the seed has sprouted and sprung up the hoe must be kept busy to prevent the weeds from growing up with the young plants. However, the plants are not thinned, as is done when crop beets are raised for sugar, but are allowed to grow until fall, just as they were sown. Before frost sets in the small beets thus grown from the mother seed are dug out, together with their tops, and those which have some defect about the roots or otherwise are picked out and ment later, "the output would have been greater?"

"Did your company want more coal than was produced?" replied witness quizzingly.

"For several years we have wanted all the coal we could get. We have never been able really to supply our orders."

"That information," answered Mr. Mitchell, "Is different from what the menyon represent usually say. They claim their sales are limited entirely by the competition of bituminous coal."

"We are not discussing competition at present," tartly replied Mr. Ross, going on to explain that "during the present era of prosperity they had worked all the mines they could to advantages."

Were sown. Before frost sets in the small beets thus grown from the mother seed are dug out, together with their tops and those which have some defect about the roots or otherwise are picked out and thrown aside. The smooth and perfect ones are then put into pits, together with their tops not more than three beets deep. The layers are put together, with their tops outward and the roots almost fouching each other, and the entire row is gradually covered with earth, beginning with a little at they may not suffer from rain, frost or insects. The soil in which the mother seed is sown should not be previously fer-littled with fresh stable manure or with any commercial fertilizer of a strong nitrogenous character, but only with nitrate of potash or phosphoric acid.

Second Year's Growth.

In the following spring the small need beets are taken out of the pits, again assorted and planted two feet apart in soil which has been thoroughly fertilized with stable manure or nitrate of potash or phosphoric acid, and is in a blan taken of potash or phosphoric acid, and is in a blan taken or phosphoric acid, and is in a blan taken or phosphoric acid, and is in a blan taken or phosphoric acid. stable manure of nitrate of potash or phosphoric acid, and is in a high state of cultivation. Condition of Sall.

As much depends upon the proper condition of the soil, it is well to remark eace more that the ground should be in good condition, i. e. thoroughly plowed and cultivated and kept free from weeds, but it must not be at all introgenous for the cultivation of the mother seed during the first year. On the other hand, the soil in which the seed beets are planted in the second year should be in the very best state of fertility, from the application of stable manure and commercial fertilizers. By reducing as much as possible the nitrogenous matter in the first year, the growth of the small seed beets will be retarded, but they will attain a very high percentage of sugar; and by pushing them the second year with strenuous fertilizers, they will yield a heavy crop of fully developed seed. The best climate is that in which dry weather predominates in the fall. After the stalks have been cut they should be protected as much as possible from the wet, otherwise the seeds lose their should be protected as much as possible from the wet, otherwise the seeds lose their should be protected as much as possible from the wet, otherwise the seeds lose their virtue of germinating. All seed that is well matured and has become thoroughly dry and been brought to shelter without being again exposed to damp weather will germinate quickly. Of course, there will be details in this, as in every other business, which will have to be found out by experience, but the general principles of this method of producing home-grown beet seed will be readily adapted to the variations of our climate and soil.

The contracts for German mother seed soid to Russia are made on the following basis: The seed is furnished on conditions that the seller will ultimately get $1.70 for every 160 pounds of beet seed harvested. To protect himself, he at the same time demands that if the crop should be a fall-ure, he gets $160 for each sack of $110 pounds of mother seed, of which $110 per sack must be paid in advance, upon delivery of the seed. At first, this seems to be an extravagantly high price, but when it is borne in mind that one sack of mother seed will yield ordinarily, at the end of two years, 1.500 sacks of beet seed (worth at the present market price $8 per sack, about $1,100) it will be admitted that the cost is none too high, and that the experiment is worth trying.

Slow healing sores are unsightly, painful and dangerous. They are a constant care and source of anxiety and worry

Chronic, slow healing sores are frequently the after effects of some long standing debilitating sickness that leaves the constitution weakened and the blood in a polluted, run down condition, when a scratch, cut, simple boil or bruise, becomes a fearful looking ulcer that grows and spreads, eating deeper and deeper into the flesh in spite of everything that can be done to check its progress. Old people whose blood is below the standard and the circulation sluggish, are tormented with face sores, and often indolent, sickly looking ulcers upon the limbs that give them hardly a moment's rest from pain and worry. Ordinary sores are liable to become chronic unless the blood is strong enough to throw off the germs and poisons, and no amount of Purify the Blood external treatment Heal the Sore. they will continue to grow worse and worse, and many times terminate in that most S. S. S. cures slow healing sores by purifying and invigorating the germ-laden, vitiated blood and purging the system of all corrupt matter, thus striking at the real cost of production until it is thought that cause and removing every hindrance to a plantation expenses will not exceed one rapid and successful cure, and this is the only possible way to reach these deeply rooted, dangerous places. S. S. S. strengthens and tones up the circulation, supplies
