

Danish New Malt Beer

Made by a new malting process, in a new malt-house, under absolutely perfect conditions.

Our malting process requires eight days at an increased cost of 20 per cent over other methods of four and five days.

The better the malt the better the beer.

OVERWORK ARMY OFFICERS

Headquarters Department of the Missouri is Not Properly Manned.

STAFF IS SHORT AND DUTIES ARE ONEROUS

War Department Authorities Do Not Give Proper Recognition to the Importance of the Local Army Headquarters.

There is considerable complaint among officers of the army stationed at the headquarters of the Department of the Missouri that this department does not receive the attention from the War department which its importance would seem to justify.

The officers in responsible positions in the department are loth to talk of the feeling which they hold and it is hard to get an expression from them upon the subject, but they are not always clamorous, and officers who occasionally visit headquarters are not so backward of speaking of the feeling which they find here on the subject. One of these visiting officers, speaking of the matter, said the other day:

There is no doubt that the officers at the headquarters of the Department of the Missouri feel that the department is slighted by the War department. An inspection of the rosters of the other departments will show that the general staffs of those departments are better filled than those of the Department of the Missouri. It is nothing unusual at Omaha to find one man holding three or four general staff positions, and this man is often one of the personal aides of the commanding general. This means that he can only give superficial attention to the work in any of the departments, leaving the work to be done by clerks, who are more or less familiar with the routine, but have no personal responsibility such as is required of the officer. When the troops were all in the Philippines many of the departments were in the same condition, but since the return of a large number of those troops and the releasing of staff officers there is little or no excuse for the condition at Omaha. It does not exist in other departments.

Favers for Chicago. "One of the officers stationed at headquarters said to me that it seems that the Department of the Missouri must take a position subordinate to almost every other department in the country, and that the War department seems to consider a department of the army important according to the size of the city in which the headquarters are located, regardless of the number of troops or posts in the department. He illustrated his point by saying that in the Department of the Lakes, whose headquarters are located at Chicago, the general staff is kept comparatively filled, while that department has neither the number of troops nor the number of posts within its borders as those in this department. At the present time there is much work in the engineer's office, but the chief engineer officer is stationed not at headquarters, but in command of a battalion of engineers at Fort Leavenworth and makes occasional trips to the headquarters, the routine work of the office being in charge of one of the aides of the commanding general. Before the Spanish war three paymasters were stationed at Omaha. It has been only recently that two have been stationed here and one of them was removed, so that it became necessary to call upon the paymaster at St. Louis to visit posts in the northern part of the department when a number of soldiers were to be paid off. Although a considerable quantity of meat and packing house products are purchased in Omaha, there is but one officer of the commissary department regularly stationed here, while there are several at Chicago.

There is a report in army circles that representations on this subject will be made to the War department, with the purpose of impressing upon the people in charge the necessity for increasing the number of officers at these headquarters and of showing them that the importance of the department does not depend upon the size of the town where the headquarters are located."

After these were attended to at the police station he was able to return to his apartments.

Press dispatches announce that Captain Grote Hutcheson has arrived in New York from the Orient. Captain Hutcheson was for some time prior to and after the Spanish war on duty at headquarters of the Department of the Missouri and left here to join his regiment in the Philippines. Arriving there he was placed on the staff of General Chaffee and went with the army to China, being stationed for some time at Pekin. He returned to staff duty in the Philippines. Power lived in the Quaker city when a young man and it was then and there that the incident occurred. He changed to a new rooming place one day, and a man always gets into trouble when he changes place of residence in Philadelphia. Back in Uncle Billy Penn's time they fell into the habit of building rows of houses exactly alike, and they have been at it ever since, with the result that nowadays one may walk blocks and blocks and still apparently be in front of the same flat that flanked him when he started. Power moved into such a row and came home late the first night after he had moved. He turned in at a door he supposed to be the right one and found that the key furnished him exactly fit the lock. This was the first door he opened, but the door on the right hand side at the top of the second flight, and entered the room. Having no matches and not knowing where to feel for them, he undressed in the dark and groped his way over to the bed. That's as far as he ever got, for when he reached down to smooth his pillow his fingers clutched a handful of long silky hair that he knew never adorned a man's head, and he backed off hastily, breathlessly, and it is a safe bet, blushing. As he did so the window curtain was blown gently inward, revealing Power and permitted a stray moonbeam to steal in and disclose a certain white garment which he was equally certain belonged to no man.

The subsequent moment was the most distressing in John Power's long existence.

GOLF IS NOT THE ONLY GAME

Field Club Members Want Recognition for Other Outdoor Sports.

DEBATE PROMISED AT ANNUAL MEETING

Insurgents Who Do Not Admit Exclusive Policy of Last Year Will Make Demand for Change.

When the members of the Omaha Field Club meet Wednesday evening at the Commercial club rooms to elect officers there will probably be a lively contest between the admirers of golf and those members who desire the club to promote other forms of athletic sport as well. The champions of the general athletic games are headed by John Francis of the Burlington railroad and others who joined the club at its organization. These men play golf to a certain extent, but they do not want the Field club limited in its work to that one game and have endeavored to keep alive a number of sports since the grounds were opened. Leslie I. Abbott, who is energetic in his position on this, says:

"We expect there will be a contest over the election of officers, especially the seven members of the board of trustees, who will have the policy of the club in charge for the coming year. When the club was organized it was with the understanding that it would not be limited to golf, but for the last year it has practically done nothing but promote this game. Now, I am an admirer of base ball and have tried to maintain a club. When we proposed to purchase balls the board was very reluctant to issue the money, the checkbook have found the same difficulty and the admirers of lawn tennis have had to fight for what they needed. At the same time we have spent $1,900 to secure golf links and have kept men watering the greens at a cost of $10 a day. Golf is all right, but that is not the only game, and we are determined to see if the members will stand for such discrimination. It costs money to maintain golf links and no one objects to an expenditure of an amount necessary to keep up the grounds as they were first planned, but we object to spending money for golf to the exclusion of all other games, and we are going to make this an issue in the coming election."

At the meeting there are to be elected a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and seven directors. For president there have been mentioned W. S. Spangler, Jay D. Foster, Leslie I. Abbott and C. K. Urquhart. If Abbott is chosen president a new vice president will have to be elected. Byron Hastings, the president secretary, has no opposition for that place and neither has Philip Potter, the treasurer. The membership is now 500, the legal limit, and there is a waiting list. It is expected that a few of the members will resign and that a number of new ones will be elected after the annual meeting.

Don't Accept Counterfeits. For piles, skin diseases, sores, cuts, bruises, burns and other wounds nothing equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Don't accept counterfeits. None genuine except DeWitt's. It has cured since 1861 with protruding, bleeding piles and until recently could find no permanent relief," says J. F. Gerall of St. Paul, Ark. "Finally I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, which soon completely cured me."

RED-HEADED WOMEN IN OMAHA. Traveling Men Who Notice Things Say They Are Remarkably Scarce Here.

S. Raymond Nichols is authority for the declaration that Omaha has a less per cent of red haired girls than any other city of its class in the United States, except Pittsburgh.

"I don't pretend to explain why this is true," said Mr. Nichols, a guest at the Schlitz hotel, "but it is, so far as my observation has gone. Two years ago a party of traveling men happened to have assembled at a Chicago hotel and a hair tonic salesman of the bunch started talking of dyes that were used and that led to a discussion of the colors of hair. Finally someone asked what per cent of women had red hair. Nobody knew, but everybody wanted to. Somebody proposed that we make observation and find out. We all promised to do it, but the others forgot their promise within the week. I was always something of a crank on that sort of thing and I started in to make good."

"I began in Chicago that next morning and kept count of the first 500 women who passed near enough to me that day for me to notice the color of their hair without making special effort. I have a good head for figures and the counting quickly became a mere mechanical process of adding, one by one, to the total of those with red hair and the total of those with hair of any of the other colors until I had reached a grand total of 500. When I left Chicago I set the day's totals down in a notebook. The next day I visited Milwaukee and I did the same there for one day. And I have done it in every town that I have since visited for a first time, or rather a few times since I began making this count. I find it a paying investment for, strange though it may seem, a customer will nearly always be readily interested with the tale. "As for the figures," said Mr. Nichols, taking out a small notebook, "here are some of them. In Atlanta, Ga., I noted among 100 women 122 with the red or pronounced auburn shade; in Louisville, Ky., 99; in Tampa, Fla., 96; in San Francisco, 65; in New York, 56; in Chicago, 54; in Denver, 51; in Milwaukee and Des Moines, 48; in Pittsburgh and Omaha only 45. Can anybody in Omaha explain that?"

McDonald in Jail Again. Although John McDonald of 423 South Nineteenth street had just finished thirty days in the county jail for assault he straightway proceeded to get into more trouble. According to the story of Mack Wiles, who has been at 1713 St. Mary's bakery, he was asleep at his desk in the bakery when he was awakened by McDonald, who was armed and had a silver dollar from the till. At the police station McDonald vigorously resisted being searched, expressing a wish to be shot, in which hidden place he carried $20, and it required the combined efforts of half a dozen officers to quiet him without violence. As the struggle continued the sympathy of Wiles was aroused and he began loudly to discourse about his Teutonic birth and American citizenship, endeavoring to knock out any man on the police force who might be more, until it was necessary to take him into custody, upon the charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Well Known in Omaha. Albert M. Bushnell, who was killed in Chicago by the explosion of a boiler in Swift's packing house, was formerly a resident of Omaha. He was an agent for Swift in South Omaha and lived at 2229 Twenty-eighth street. In this city his family consisted of a wife and two children. He came to Omaha from Chicago early in the present year and until 1901, when he accepted a transfer to Chicago, where he became assistant purchasing agent, which position he held at the time of his death.

Wanted in South Omaha. Charles Epstein, living at 239 Oak street, was arrested yesterday by the local police at the request of the South Omaha authorities by whom he is accused of having killed. It is charged that Epstein sold a dog which had been stolen from his keep, and a resident of South Omaha, and that he converted to his own use $55 which the dog's owner had paid for its purchase. He was at once taken to South Omaha.

INSURE AND KILL CHILDREN

Pennsylvania Parents Must Face Charge of Double Murder.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—After an investigation into the death of Annie Williams, aged 9, and her 3-year-old sister Josephine on October 21 and 22, the police have detained the parents of the dead children.

The father was taken into custody late last night and the wife was removed to a police station today along with her other three small children.

Annie and Josephine died of what the attending physician thinks was poison. A chemical analysis tended to prove the doctor's theory and the arrest of the parents followed.

It is said the dead children were insured, the elder one for $115 and the younger for $20.

Explanation from Indiana. GENOA, Neb., Nov. 30.—To the Editor of The Bee: In all fairness to the Genoa Indian foot ball team I desire to state that it was not the first team that played at St.romburg on Thanksgiving day. There were but the first team players in Genoa on the 21st of the second team, and Porter was the second team, and Porter was the account of the game as given in The Bee of the 24th would give the impression that it was the first team that played at St.romburg and we would be pleased to have your explanation.

On behalf of the Genoa second team I desire to state that the St.romburg players are gentlemen and know how to treat visitors kindly, as the Indian boys have never been treated better than at St.romburg. Very truly, W. A. K. Manager Genoa Indian Foot Ball Team.

Convicts Ohio Murderer. ATHENS, O., Nov. 30.—Frank Smith, aged 25, who shot and killed Perry Oxley on 28th, was found guilty of murder in the second degree this afternoon.

A Giant's Struggle

It is a highly dramatic story and brings into play the strongest passions of strong men in struggle--greed, ambition, conspiracy love of conquest--with the tragedies and hatreds that are sure to follow.

In 1858 the first oil well was drilled and thousands rushed into the oil regions and made fortunes. But one man, with the great imagination that makes poets, inventors, artists, generals, and leaders of every sort, and with sure instinct for strategy, laid his lines to get control. His advances were contested as stoutly as any battle that was ever fought and the struggle cost lives and fortunes and the happiness of thousands. But he won and the result is the $110,000,000.

Standard Oil Trust that controls almost the entire oil industry of the country, owns its own vessels, cars, wharfs, and 25,000 miles of pipe line; controls railroads, owns big blocks in the steel trust, is now transferring the beef trust, and only last month, came to the rescue in a Wall Street panic.

All this is powerfully and dramatically and thoroughly told in Miss Ada M. Tarbell' "Rise of the Standard Oil Company" now running in McClure's. Each number gives a complete episode. You can begin at any time, and any one can understand it--no knowledge of business is required.

Christmas McClure's is ready. It would be a great magazine without this article; but with it!

Boys don't care. They only think of today. It's the parents who must watch and worry. They know what exposure to the wet and cold means--tender throats, sore lungs, hard coughs. That's why so many homes keep on hand Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Just a single dose, when the cold first comes on, is often sufficient. Your own doctor will explain why this medicine is so good for coughs of all kinds, for bronchitis, and even for consumption.
