As the roll of the dead was read by Secretary Jacobs the lights were extinguished until the tablet became blank.

The opening and closing ceremonies were according to the ritual of the order. During the exercises two anthems were rendered by the Elks' quartet, consisting of field sang "Crossing the Bar," and I. M. rendered DeKoven's "Reces-

The principal address was delivered by Hon. Henry Vollmer, exalted ruler of the Davenport (Ia.) lodge of Elks. As an introduction to his address Mr

Vollmer recited in full Ingersoll's "Rhapsody on Life," and then drew a lesson from the downfall of the French monarchy to show that in spite of the hollow old forms still surviving, democracy is regnant throughout the world. Continuing, he said in part:

Lesson from Life.

It is as balm to the heart on a memorial day like this to find that all good men, whatever be their creed, or if they have no creed at all, can stand together on the grand humanitarian ideas of our great order. With the living memory of our beloved dead present with us today, it is more than a consolation that we can again consecrate ourselves to friendship, charity, justice and brotherly love. The observance of this annual day, commanded by the statutes of our order, is worth more to cur departed brothers than epitaphs cut in Parlan marble or monuments on enduring brass.

We look about us and faces are missing in the ranks of our brethren. As to those of our brotherhood who have passed to that country from "whose bourne no traveler returns," the ritual of our order contains the most appropriate expression of our sentiments toward them: "We write their faults upon the sand, their virtues on the tablets of love and memory."

Rev. George Edward Walk, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church and chaplain of the lodge, took as the subject of his address "The World's Heritage of Sorrow," saying

To the normal soul every condition in life finds a suitable expression and every man acts just right who faithfully performe the duties and discharges the obligations which Rots just right who faithfully performe the duties and discharges the obligations which his particular state or condition requires. As individuals and as a brotherhood we are blessed with seasons of prosperity; then again there are visited upon us times of adversity—of sorrow. Clues to Ida County Robbery.

The sheriff of Ida county is still at work on a number of clues declared to be significant in connection with the bank robbery at Arthur. The robbers appear to have got away without leaving anything to indicate who they are. The sheriff has been following up some clues and insists that it is only a matter of a short time until he will cause some arrests in the case. It is generally believed that the work was done by persons who live in that part of the state and that they were familiar with the use of drills and explosives from having been miners.
