The village sexton, in addition to being gravedigger, acted as a stonecutter, house repairer and furniture remover. The local doctor, having obtained a more lucrative appointment in another county employed the sexton to assist in his removal. When it came to settling up accounts the doctor deducted an old contra account due by the sexton. He wrote at the same time, objecting to the charge made for removing his furniture: "If this was steady it would pay much better than gravedigging."

The sexton replied:
"Indado, Oi wud be glad to ave a steady job; gravediggin' is very alack since you left." What Makes Ruby Lips.
