could read. It is the Very Sacred City, the monks, says a writer in Scribner's. A thousand pagoda bells give tongue to the wind there when the sun goes down; a crumbling arm of blue hills, and something broods over it with solicitude. This you suspect from the air of the place and the way the shrill talk of the parrots and the complaint of the goats and the laughter of the people with the commissioner, and see under the very zenith where the low gray sky is caught up, the square of the dark red crenellated walls of the old royal city, three parallel clear most thinking back at the sky; and then you are sure that over and above the government of India some spirit is in some possession here, some spirit that bends in affection over finished and forgot-
