Bar Asseciation Wants Law Makers to Fix Number of Supreme Judges.

TO GET AUTHORITY FROM POPULAR VOTE

After Adoption of Several Committee Reports Convention Hears Address on "Socialism" by Chancellor E. Benjamin Andrews.

The second and last day of the third anual meeting of the Nebraska State Bar association was an exceedingly busy one. In the morning papers were read by Commissioner C. S. Lobingier of Omaha, Prof. Charles A. Robbins of the Nebraska State university and W. R. Kelligar of Auburn. and there was carried a motion to reconsider the association's action of the day before committing it as favorable to a constitutional convention as the best means of remedying supreme court defects.

In the afternoon this latter matter was taken up and disposed of by the adoption of the J. H. McIniosh resolutions, leaving to the legislature the regulation of numerical strength and salaries of the court. There was adopted also the report of the committee on judicial administration as printed in The Bee some days ago; a supplemental report from the committee on legislation affecting the profession, such report being for the negotiable instruments act as recommended by the American Bar association and already on the statutes of eighteen states; a testimonial to Judge G. M. Lambertson, who died last June, the paper being drawn by Judge Wakeley and read by him. Bills endorsed were one suggested by Judge Roscoe Pound, looking to the aboltanment of the "assignment of error" technicality involved in appealing cases, and another requiring that in making such appeal the supersedess bond in all cases going up shall be the same as in rocceedings, instead of the "waste" bond permitted in simple appeal.

Election of Officers.

After a paper by Halleck F. Rose of Lincoin and before the address of Chancellor Andrews, the association elected officers by endorsing the nominees of the executive council, and by the same proceeding ad-

Throughout the meeting more attention has been given to remedying the insufficiency, numerically, of the state supreme court than to any other one topic. Kelligar of Auburn was ready yesterday morning to defend the McIntosh resolutions of the day before, which had been voted down because at first thought to be unconstitutional.

Adopt McIntosh Resolutions.

They had been given attention during the night by many attorneys, however, and were promptly taken up, on Kelligar's motion, and finally adopted. They are the meat of Senator Hall's bill, and the association plans to first get the legislature's approval and then let the association's executive council go before the various political conventions with the proposal that on the ballot of each party be placed the proposition itself, which is that the legislature be permitted to regulate the size of the court and the salaries, the size to depend upon the amount of work before the court. It is the opinion that the proposition, thus made a part of the ticket' proper, will be carried safely, avoiding the tail end process which has always been the Waterloo of attempts at constitutional amendment.

The adopted report of the committee on judicial administration, submitted by Judge C. B. Letton of Fairbury as chairman, contained four principal recommendations each of which was discussed and then thinly populated counties the county attorneys be given only the civil cases and thus saves to apply on a general fund with which one able criminal lawyer will be engaged to serve several countles as district attorney for a district to be made up on a basis of population.

Andrews on Socialism.

Chancellor Andrews' address on "Socialwas in part as follows:

ism" was in part as follows:

If I have any special qualification for discussing socialism it is that of sympathetic opposition. I was once as near being a disciple of Rodbertus as I could come without baptism into the church. I thought I saw in Rodbertian socialism, socialism scientifically wrought out and applied, a remedy for the most glaring social evils.

In time and upon study, however, the system which had seemed to me so desirable grew to look quite otherwise, the difficulties connected with it assuming the bar of the state of Nebraska, and said difficulties connected with it assuming vaster and vaster proportions, until in my thought they towered above and outnumbered those necessarily bound up with the present order. I was thus converted to the opinion that society has greater hope of reform on the general basis of individualism than by flying to the unknown though inevitable ills accompanying a socialistic regime.

If the question were merely whether or not it is desirable for government to possess and administer certain indispensable public utilities it would not be worth discussion. The thoughtful people are few, however opposed to socialism, who do not believe that government will in time take over a great many of the productive agencies now in private hands. Government might go a long way in this without even an approach to socialism. Socialism would not be reached until all material instrumentallities for the production of wealth had passed into the state a hands, or at least so many of them that individual initiative in its present and historic form had coased to function.

There is a sadly convincing induction, familiar to students of social history, that

There is a sadly convincing induction, familiar to students of social history, that whenever material betterment comes to the ignorant poor, as through a rise of wages or the chespening of bread, it is speedly checked by increase in population. The principal consideration that forbade

I for one believe it democratic for the people's work to be well and economically done, which never occurs under multiple headship such as popular socialism must involve.

The states which have discarded submission are attempting to turn back the dial of history and to sacrifice the results of twenty centuries of civic evolution."

On Rural Highways.

W. R. Kelligar of Auburn read a paper on "Rural Highways," in which he said: The fundamental errors in the present law of highways are in not providing for a general plan or scheme of construction of good roads and in taking from the people themselves immediate power over the sub-Ject.

The problem of good roads in Nebraska, while one of magnitude, is also one of easy solution. A simple statement of our road mileage instantly forces one to the conclusion that the only practical highway of the immediate future is the dirt ma not that every energy of the state should be turned to the accomplishment of this purpose. To bring about this reform all that portion of he present nighway new which deals directly with the road and its repairs should be eleminated and a complete and comprehensive system formulated and mitted twenty-three additional members. The offluers elected were: John L. Webster of Gmaha for president; C. J. Phelps of Schuyler, first vice president; E. C. Calkins of Kearney, second vice president; A. R. Olson of Wisner, third vice president; A. R. Olson of Wisner, third vice president; C. A. Gose of Omaha, treasurer, and W. R. Kelligar of Auburn, to succeed Congressman E. H. Hinshaw of Fairbury as member of the executive council.

New members admitted were: J. O. Detweller, W. A. Dilworth, G. C. Martin, I. J. Dunn, E. J. Sullivan, J. W. Woodrough, F. L. Weaver, W. M. Giller, George H. Thummel, Thomas F. Lee, F. W. Fitch, O. C. As to Road Funds.

This money, when collected by the county treasurer, should be paid over to and expended by the road district under the direction of the proper officer of the district. Each township at stated periods should elect one road overseer who should have entire charge of the roads, and whose compensation should be such as to make the office attractive; he should give bond and have the power to contract on behalf of the road district in all matters connected with the roads, and should settle his accounts annually with the county commissioners and county treasurer.

The new plan should provide not only the machinery of law, but specify the very kind of road to be called a good road, and particularly provide for drainage. This law should be so framed that the burden of constructing and maintaining all bridges within the township or road district, either under thirty feet in width or under the cost of $100, should be upon the road district and all other bridges should be constructed and maintained at the expense of the county. All damages happening from the hegigent construction of roads or bridges by the road district should be recoverable.

county. All damages happening from the hegigent construction of roads or bridges by the road district should be recoverable from the road district and not from the county at large.

Section 54, chapter xviii, of the compiled statutes, insofar as it provides for the election of county commissioners by districts, should be repealed and commissioners elected by the electors of the entire county. This section was enacted in 1831 crs elected by the electors of the entire county. This section was enacted in 1891 as a shield for the inhabitants of the outlying districts of Lancaster and Douglas counties against the greed for office of the politicians of Lincoln and Omaha, and while the purpose of the act may have been good, the law liself is utterly indefensible on principal and the excuse for its passage entirely inadequate to justify the saddling of this bad law on the remainder of the state. of the state.

Lawyers Too Plentiful.

In discussing "Preparation for the Bar," Prof. Charles A. Robbins of the University separately approved. The first was that in of Nebraska gave the profession a rather severe jolting, declaring that it is now easier to become a lawyer than any other their salaries cut, the amount each county kind of professional man and that the lawyer has ceased to be as a rule the most learned man of his community. At present, he said, the education of a doctor, an engineer or a horse doctor is more severe than that of a lawyer, so far as fixed requirements are concerned, and in ten years the numerical strength of the profession Another recommendation is that there be has increased 224 per cent, whereas the corrected anomalies in the reform school medical increase is but 84 per cent, and the statutes, such, for instance, as that which theological 24 per cent, It is Prof. Robbins' specifies that a boy cannot be sent there view that a man to be a lawyer should have after he is 16 years old, yet that he may be a college education and must have a High detained there until he is 18. The third annual convention of the Nebraska State Bar association closed with a banquet given at the Her Grand. After the meal Francis Brogan, the toast-

Davidson of Tecumseh, the retiring president of the society. Mr. Davidson spoke of the work of the State Bar association briefly. He was followed by John L. Mr. McGilton said Nebraska is rich in all that makes a state great, but in addition to its natural and acquired resources the state needs good laws and that in order to secure such laws a constitutional convention is necessary. He said that he hoped the present legislature should provide for
