Bound to Have Chickens. Thieves succeeded after several attempts in depopulating the chicken house of Carl F. Andersen of East Broadway, Monday night. Anderson heard thieves trying to get into his hen house Sunday night and drove them away. The thfeves in their flight dropped a basket and a woman's skirt. They returned the same night and made another attempt, but Anderson was on the watch and frightened them away. Monday night Anderson was again on watch when he heard a noise at the hen house and ran out into the yard just in time to see two fellows run away. He continued to watch and about 2 o'clock in the morning, hearing a noise in the yard, rushed out only to find the door of the hen house wide open and all his chickens gone. He hastened to the police station and Officer Lorenzen was detailed on the case. When Anderson and the officer reached the house they found the bodies of the twentysix chickens in the bed of Indian Creek only a few yards from the house. The necks of the birds had been wrung and thrown down the creek bank, the thieves evidently intending to return for them This, however, was frustrated by Mrs. Anderson, who while her husband was gone for the police saw two men approach the yard and frightened them away.

The park board was represented at the meeting by Commissioners Graham and forty witnesses in attendance, also many Petersen and their attorneys. The supervisors falled to see what interest they as the county. The court room was packed representatives of the county had in the and the halls and stairways filled with dispute, as no showing had been made that the county had any title to the property involved. George S. Wright on behalf of much alike as two peas from the same pod, himself and George Mayne urged the supervisors to keep out of the fight. He contended that he had just as much right to come before the board as the park commissioners and ask the county to give him a quit claim deed.

Fearing that the owners of property abutting Carr lake, which was given to the city of Council Bluffs by act of congress February 9, 1881, would take similar action, the park commissioners have also requested the county to give it a quit claim deed to it. This lake and its acreted land lies south of the city in Lewis township and is known as "Island park." Like Big lake, it is outside the municipal limits. The board took the matter under advisement, but as it is very doubtful if the county has any claim either parks, the board is not expected to interfere. Man Killed at Mosquito Creek Cross ing is Henry Stacey a G. A. R.

Veteran.

The man who was run down and killed Monday afternoon while hauling a load of wood into the city by a Rock Island passenger train at the crossing north of the Mosquito creek bridge, was identified yesterday morning as Henry Stacey of this city. Stacey lived with his wife and two children, a daughter and son, at Fifteenth street and Avenue D. He was identified by Ed Dalton, who resides on Tostevin avenue. Dalton and Stacey had both been engaged in buying cottonwood near Hinton station and hauling it into the city for sale. Dalton, however, was not with Stacey Monday when the latter met his death. Stacey was a veteran of the civil war and Abe Lincoln post, Grand Army of the Republic, will take charge of his funeral, which will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Lunkley's undertaking rooms. Rev. G. W. Snyder of St. John's English Lutheran church will conduct the services and interment will be in Fairview ceme

The testimony of Binkley and Stanton was practically the same. They stated that rounded the curve just east of the crosscollision. The whistle was blown for the crossing and an effort was made to stop the tracks, but the engine struck squarely between the wagon and horses. The dead body of Stacey and several pieces of wood were found on the pilot of the locomotive when the train was brought to a stop.

Diller testified that he met Stacey just south of the Mosquito bridge and hearing the train whistle turned just in time to witness the acident. Diller also testified that the electric alarm bell at the crossing had been out of order and had not rung for a long time. Mrs. Green, who resides north of the crossing, stated she was looking out of the window when she noticed Starey drive on the crossing and then attempt to back the team off when the train whistled. He was mous Yankee story teller will give a free | too late, however, and Mrs. Green saw the train strike the wagon, which was smashed to pieces. Stacey was 54 years of age and his children are 8 and 5 years old. Mrs. Stacey was prostrated yesterday when she learned it was her husband who had been killed and her condition was quite serious.

It is called the Home Invention Circle and he proposes, by a system of colored drawings and chalk and crayon work, together with prize contests and games and pictures, to teach the children religion and patriotism and develop their inventive faculties. He will establish a publishing house and manufacturing plant to test his theory. The plan has been submitted to some of the best educators of the state, who say it is far in advance of the present kindergarten methods used in the schools and may be productive of much good. The society has badge and motto that all will adopt, and should it prove successful among the children of Creston, who will begin the study as soon as plans can be completed, he proscope and try and have it adopted in the
