Some Met by Chance, Others Break Jail, and Two Land Millions

The marriage of W. L. Grimmer and Miss Brickle near Weldon, N. C., on the 18th inst., was one of the most romantic in the history of North Carolina.

Mr. Grimmer, formerly of Richmond, Va., has been fighting against heavy odds to gain possession of his bride.

The night before Mr. Grimmer took the train for Weldon, and with his friend, B. A. Lawrence, laid plans for stealing the young woman from her father.

All in Twelve Hours

The closing scene of a romantic courtship was the marriage in Justice Wolf's court room in Chicago last Saturday afternoon.

Let's get married right away," Wicks suggested.

At first Miss Dell remonstrated, and insisted on time to prepare a wedding trousseau.

"I'm rather bashful, and don't want a lot of people throwing rice and causing us all kinds of embarrassment," Wicks said.

After an hour Miss Dell gave way to Wicks' persuasion.

"I'm rather bashful, and don't want a lot of people throwing rice and causing us all kinds of embarrassment," Wicks said.

"No, not exactly," the bridegroom said.

"I came in from my home at Monmouth to visit friends a few days ago and last evening I went to a party out on South Park avenue.

The Ubiquitous Peter Smith

(Copyright, 1903, by Jeanne Olive Lottreux.) Editha Allyn burst into the library. Her brother-in-law lifted his eyes from his book and indignantly looked her over.

"You make quite a dress, Editha, a very welcome one, but you break into my story. What is it this time?" Dr. Kenworthy was leaning lazily back in a big leather chair.

"I'm in earnest," Editha said, "at the moment I'm in a great deal of a hurry to get on my feet."

"You know well enough—your precious Peter J. Smith. He doesn't follow me. Precious, too," he mused provocatively.

"Well, didn't you?" "No, that Smith!" "Glad to hear it, Editha. Young De Kaye has too much money and too little to do."

"I suppose not, and admitted slowly: "Everything conspires against me. If I only knew he hated it as I do I wouldn't care so much, but he doesn't show a sign."

"I'm rather bashful, and don't want a lot of people throwing rice and causing us all kinds of embarrassment," Wicks said.

Colonel Robert C. Clowry, president of the Western Union Telegraph company, is well known, rose from a very humble position in the service of that corporation.

Clowry saw a son of Graus pathetically watching the gyrations of a kite which had become entangled in the telegraph wires.

Clowry saw his opportunity and disappeared. Twenty minutes later he handed Graus a message, which he said had just arrived.

HOW UNCLE SAM PACKS SEEDS

Nearly Forty Millions Will Be Distributed by the Agricultural Department.

"The work of distributing 39,000,000 of seeds by the government has begun," said B. F. Brown, the inventor of the various machines used in the distribution.

"Under the present system this work is let to the lowest bidder, and I have the contract this year. The result of this rivalry is that there is close competition in wages, and the wages paid are about the same as those received by fiddlers and counters of houses distributing circulars of various kinds, about 14 a week.

"We have secured the right to supply the first two sections of the country named. We have printed envelopes and wrappers for this work and this portion of it is completed and organized. Altogether we have on hand about one-third of the seed.
