A Collection of the Writings of James J. Ingalls Published by His Wife.

SCRIBNERS ISSUE BOOK BY BISHOP POTTER

Barnard Alderson Has Written Biography of Andrew Carnegie-Spencer, Trask & Co. Issue a Statistical Table for Bankers.

A collection of the writings of James J. Ingalls—essays, addresses and orations—arranged and authorized by Mrs. J. J. Ingalls and William Eisey Connelley, has just been published. Mrs. John J. Ingalls, widow of the famous Kansas senator, has brought to most interesting fruition her cherished desire to reveal to the world what may be called the home side of her distinguished husband. In this book published by the Hudson-Kimberly Publishing company, the work contains an introduction by George R. Peck, an appropriate memorial of the great statesman and many of his letters and fragmentary sketches. These reveal a gentle and tender quality in the nature and character of Senator Ingalls which he did not manifest to the world in his public career. The country looked upon Senator Ingalls as a man of phenomenal brilliancy, with a tendency to satire and keen exhortation which made him greatly feared by his enemies and his competitors in debate, and which drew to the senate galleries thousands of auditors whenever it was known that he was to speak. His power for withering invective was often compared to that of John Randolph of Roanoke, and it is certain that his mastery of language was not equaled by any of his contemporaries.

The Scribners have published a new book entitled "The Citizen and the Industrial Situation," by Bishop Henry C. Potter. It deals upon a phase of the great capital and labor problem with which he has been so prominently engaged as an arbitrator. Mr. Potter's book is in effect a direct appeal to the citizen not to limit his responsibilities of citizenship to his own class. His method is an examination into the relations between capital and labor, the case of the working man and of the obligations of the average citizen to him from a social and Christian point of view. The chapters of the volume are: "The Citizen in His Relation to the Industrial Situation," "The Citizen and the Working Man," "The Citizen and the Capitalist," "The Citizen and the Consumer," "The Citizen and the Corporation," and "The Citizen and the State."

Barnard Alderson has written a biography of "Andrew Carnegie," in which he tells of the extraordinary career of the great iron master from the beginning of life as a messenger boy to multi-millionaire. Mr. Carnegie's career is in many ways more characteristically American than the career of boys born in this country, as he went into the west without friends or assistance of any kind and built up his life's work by his own extraordinary initiative. In the preparation of this volume the author and publishers have had the assistance of people who know Mr. Carnegie best, and the book contains for the first time an adequate record of the beginnings of his career, as well as the working out of his ideals. Published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

"Scientific Side-Lights," compiled by James G. Fernald, published by Funk & Wagnalls, is a book that will be of value to the man or woman who desires swift outlooks across the vast field of science, and who wishes from time to time to use its riches as the current coin of illustration without devoting long hours to exhaustive scientific study. Everything here is bright, quick, ready. There are no prefaces, no homilies, no long-drawn arguments nor tedious enumerations. All the tiresome work has been done for the reader by the editor. The authors have been selected, the volumes read, the dull parts skipped, and, wherever a bright gem was hidden, it has been picked up and set so as to catch the light. One who thinks of "science" as something dry, dreary, technical and forbidding, with abstract theories uttered in "words of learned length and thundering sound," will find this volume a revelation of a new world. Here are learned men using simple language, masters of science telling stories, conclusions given without preliminaries, while exquisite descriptions of natural scenery show how scientific explorers retain appreciation and love of the beautiful. It is as if a company of masters of science sat down to talk with the reader, each mentioning some of the fairest and most interesting things that could be briefly told from his own department. It will be a great satisfaction to every scholarly reader to find that every extract is a direct quotation from the author named. There is not a summary, digest, compendium nor paraphrase in the book. Should the reader wish to follow up the matter and gain a wider view of the subject treated, he will find each selection located by the names of the author, book and publisher, as well as by volume, chapter and page and the date of publication. The selections thus given number 2,800, from 250 works of 102 authors. Four full indexes of "General Topics," "Cross-References," "Proper Names" and "Authors and Publishers," make all matters contained in the volume readily accessible. The compiler, James G. Fernald, associate editor of the Standard Dictionary and of the Columbia Encyclopedia, has done his work with comprehensive review of material and painstaking accuracy.

Spencer, Trask & Co., the New York bankers, announce the completion of their 1902 edition "Statistical Tables" (pocket size), which are ready for gratuitous distribution among institutions and investors. The present number is the twentieth annual edition of the booklet. Condensed information is given covering the capitalization and earnings of railroad and industrial companies. A very complete bond covering all issues listed on the New York Stock exchange, and other important bonds, is one of the main features, and is arranged in exceptionally convenient form. The section relating to industrial corporations is of special interest. The booklet contains more information in proportion to its size than any similar publication we have had occasion to examine. The press work is excellent and the whole work shows careful study.

"Can Telepathy Explain?" by Dr. Minot J. Savage, is a book in which he discusses problems that have vexed intelligent minds probably to a greater extent than any other, saying those of the religious life. He states a great number of well-authenticated instances of apparently spiritualistic revelation or communication. His discussion is frank and fearless. This work merits the widest reading, for he does it with facts and experiences. Published by Putnam's Sons.

Of particular interest to the large number of Danes resident in the United States is a volume entitled "Of America," about to be published in the Danish language by Brendano's, New York. The author, Carl Fischer-Hansen, is well known both in New York and Copenhagen, and the fact that a large part of the first edition has already been spoken goes far to prove that the publication of such a work was not only warranted but desirable. The book in question is a critical study of America and its conditions by an unprejudiced jurist. In fourteen luminous chapters he treats of the gradual growth of the United States from their infancy to their present magnificent proportions; and not only does much light upon the workings of our national and state governments, but also considers our civil, educational and military systems, our professions, our methods of conducting business, our laws and our literature. The book will be handsomely bound in cloth and will sell for $2.00. "America" will also be published in Copenhagen by Gyldenald.

The above books are for sale by the Meehan Stationery Co., 1308 Farnam street.

TABLE AND KITCHEN

- Three Morning Meals. BREAKFAST. Baked Apples with Cream. Baked Hash with Creamed Potatoes. Baked Potatoes. Baked Bananas. Baked Apples with Cream. Baked Hash with Creamed Potatoes. Baked Potatoes. Baked Bananas.

Casserole—This term may be applied to two very different things in cookery; it depends whether you mean the prepared dish or dish for preparing foods under this heading. Casserole is old French for a round-bottomed, heavy earthenware saucepan, with a nose and feet, both of which are inside and out. The French cooks prepare in these, the most delectable baked stews of chicken, squabs, game and sweetbreads known as dishes en casserole. These cooking utensils are rapidly gaining favor in America, and are being used in the French origin, but on the strength of their actual usefulness. Foods cooked in these dishes are known as dishes en casserole.

Casserole of Mock Sweetbreads—As soon as the sweetbreads come from the market place them in a bowl of cold water and let them soak until well whitened, changing the water as often as disclosed. Then put them into a saucepan and cover well with boiling water, adding a little vinegar or lemon juice and half a teaspoonful of salt to each part of sweetbreads. Let them simmer gently for fifteen minutes, then drain them and cut each one in half with a silver knife. For six individual casseroles allow half a cupful each of carrots, white turnips, string beans and French beans cut into half slices and half a cup of French peas, parboiled all the vegetables except the peas, then divide among the casseroles and place in each a half of sweetbread and two or three button mushrooms broken into small bits or shredded with silver knife. Cover with sauce, fasten on the casserole cover with strings of muslin covered with a thick flour paste, and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour. Rice Casserole with Meat—Boil a cup of rice tender in salted water, to which you have added salt and a little butter. Chop very fine one pound of any cold meat several kinds may be used—and season to taste with pepper and salt, a little celery salt and onion juice; add a beaten egg, two tablespoonfuls of fine bread crumbs and enough hot broth to moisten so the mixture will pack easily. Line a casserole with the rice; fill it with the meat and cover closely. Bake for half an hour, then turn out on a heated dish and pour brown tomato sauce around it and serve. Potato Casserole—Season a quart of mashed potatoes as for the table; add four or five egg yolks and stir the mixture over the fire until it leaves the sides of the saucepan; then with a flexible knife or spatula mold it into a cup-shaped mold or hollow cylinder; brush it over with yolk of egg and set in the oven to brown delicately. Just before serving fill the center with small birds, ragout, chops, sweetbreads or any creamed dish. The potato case may be made by molding the paste in a mold that will open or in any plain or fluted mold which, when well buttered, will let the potato case slip out easily.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Joseph Rezek Dies at Hospital From Effect of Stab Wounds

PATRICK SHEA HELD FOR HIS MURDER

Coroner Bratley Will Hold Inquest Today and County Attorney Will Act After Verdict is Rendered.

Patrick Shea will now be held on the charge of murder, as Joseph Rezek died Tuesday afternoon. Coroner Bratley was notified and the inquest will be held this afternoon at the Healy undertaking rooms on Twenty-fourth street. Among the friends of the deceased, regret is expressed, while the friends of Shea express the hope that he will be able to clear himself of the charge of murder. When the wounds of Rezek were dressed yesterday morning the doctors gave up all hope and stated that the hour of death was not far away.

It is understood that a complaint drawn by the county attorney or one of his assistants will be presented to Judge King when the case is called for trial. No complaint will be filed until after the verdict of the coroner's jury. In the meantime Shea is in the county jail. All kinds of stories are afloat about the fight of Saturday night. No two people seem to tell the same story and it will take a thorough investigation to get at the facts. Some say that Shea, who is supposed to have done the cutting, is of a quarrelsome nature while others say that he is a meek and peaceable man. As for the deceased, there is little to be said except that he made it a point to attend to his own business, and on this account it is asserted that he could not have started the fight which ended in his death.

Henry of Coal. Packers and officials of the Union Stock Yards company say that there is plenty of coal in sight now and that there is no danger of a famine. Since the weather softened coal has been coming into the yards until there is quite a supply on hand. Local dealers have enough to last until spring, but they say that there will be no reduction in the price of anthracite this winter.

Old Settler's Funeral. Funeral services over the remains of James Reenan, who died at his home, Forty-fifth and Q streets, Sunday, will be held at St. Mary's church at 7 o'clock this morning. The interment will be at Elkhorn and quite a number of friends of the deceased have stated that they will accompany the body to its last resting place.

Building Permit Secured. Tuesday Chief Engineer King of the Union Stock Yards company called on city officials and secured a building permit for the new sheep barns now being erected. One of the barns is completed, while the big one will be finished in two weeks. With the two new barns the stock yards company will be enabled to handle 25,000 sheep easily and have room for more. There is some talk among the officers of the company about making other improvements but nothing has been decided upon and will not be until the next regular meeting of the directors of the company.

Street Crossings Need Cleaning. The street crossings in the business portion of the city need cleaning badly since the snow has commenced to melt. Yesterday Mayor Koutsky had a few men to work in cleaning gutters, but not nearly enough crossings were cleaned to suit the public. One taxpayer who is quite prominent in city affairs said there is such a thing as being too economical in the matter of street repairs when the necessity warranted an expenditure of money.

Another Bank Call. The comptroller of the treasury has issued a call for a statement from all national banks at the close of business on February 6. Taking the three banks in South Omaha the statements rendered show deposits amounting to $4,110,492.52. The loans and discounts for these three banks amount to $4,390,331.15. This showing is considered exceptionally good for this time of the year. It has been a long time since the deposits have gone below the $6,000,000 mark at any time when the statement was called for from the treasury department.

Another Improvement. Those who are compelled to use the street cars at morning and night will be delighted to learn that a few more extra cars are to be placed in service in order that the public may be given suitable accommodations. As a rule the cars morning and evening are so crowded that there is no such thing as getting a seat and the straps are scarce, so that the principal hanging on has to be done on the outside. With a few more cars on the line running at three-minute intervals the service will be greatly improved, and this will

ONLY A SUGGESTION. But it has Proven of Interest and Value to Thousands.

Common sense would suggest that if one wishes to become fleshy and plump it can only result from the food we eat and digest, and that the food should be abundant and flesh-forming food, like eggs, breakfast cereals; in other words, the kind of food that make flesh are the foods which form the greater part of our daily bills of fare. But the trouble is that while we eat enough, and generally too much, of the food from abuse and overwork does not properly digest and assimilate it, which is the reason so many people remain thin and underweight; the digestive organs do not completely digest the flesh-forming breakfast and eggs and similar wholesome food. There are thousands of such who are really confirmed dyspeptics, although they may have no particular pain or inconvenience from their stomachs. If such persons would lay their prejudices aside and make a regular practice of taking after each meal one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, the food would be quickly and thoroughly digested, because these tablets contain the natural pepsin and diastase which convert any solid meal into a liquid, and by supplying this want the stomach is soon enabled to regain its natural tone and vigor.

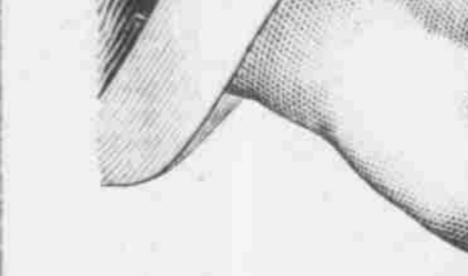

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest every form of flesh-forming food, meat, eggs, bread and potatoes, and this is the reason they so quickly build up, strengthen and invigorate thin, dyspeptic men, women and children. Invalids and children, even the most delicate, use them with marked benefit, as they contain no strong, irritating drugs, no cathartic or any harmful ingredients.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the most successful and widely known of any remedy for stomach troubles, because it is the most reasonable and scientific of modern medicines.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by every druggist in the United States and Canada, as well as in Great Britain, at 50 cents for complete treatment. Nothing further is required to cure any stomach trouble, or make thin, nervous, dyspeptic people strong, plump and well.

BRITISH PROTOCOL SIGNED

Bowen Disposes of First Document for The Hague Arbitrators' Guidance.

OTHER NEGOTIATIONS STILL DELAYED

German and Italian Ministers Unable to Frame Proposal Satisfactory to Castro's Envoy, Though Hitch Expected but Temporary.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Great Britain's protocol has been formally accepted by Mr. Bowen for Venezuela. The German and Italian conventions are still undergoing revision, but assurances are given that they eventually will be made to conform in all essential respects to that of the British ambassador. Owing to the illness of the British ambassador, Mr. Bowen called at the embassy today and personally signified his approval of the agreement. He then presented his formal note of acceptance, which has been cable to London. It appears that the insertion in the German protocol of the provision for advance payment was the result of a misunderstanding on the part of the German foreign office.

The Italian ambassador's instructions are such that he can make little headway until he knows what is contained in the German protocol. He, however, has made a rough draft of his convention and it will take only a short while after the completion of the German convention to put the finishing touches to the protocol.

In order to remove friction between the allies Mr. Bowen has agreed that, upon the conclusion of the controversy, all treaties which existed between the parties shall come again into force without further negotiations.

A new camp of the Woodmen of the World was instituted Tuesday in the Woodmen block. The new camp starts out on the first of the year. The camp has the promise of a very healthy growth during the next few weeks. The first session of the camp was held last evening, and was quite largely attended by the new members. The name to be adopted by the camp will be decided upon at a later meeting when the charter is received. The officers will also be elected this week.

Toll House on Bridge Burns.

The toll house on the Douglas street bridge was completely destroyed by fire shortly before 12 o'clock last night. The roof of the shed caught fire from the chimney of the heating stove. The fire spread rapidly and the toll house was completely destroyed. The loss of about $150 was caused by the fire. The toll house was a small building, and was used for the collection of tolls on the bridge. The fire was caused by a gas leak from the heating stove, which had been left burning after the toll house had been closed for the night.

AT THE PLAYHOUSES

"The Cowboy and the Lady" at Boyd. Even the hitherto-undoubted press agent hesitates to attempt to classify "The Cowboy and the Lady" but bills it merely as "Nat Goodwin's great success." Clever agent! As a tragedy it would be ridiculous; as a drama it would be impossible; as a farce it would seem to detract from the dignity of its ingenious author, Mr. Clyde Fitch. But as simply an unlabeled entertainment it is invulnerable. Achilles without his heel. If one would complain (as undoubtedly any Nebraskan who ever ran with the herd could complain) that some of the characters are impossible, the answer could be that they are not down on the bill as anything legitimate, and if another would complain that some of the language is decidedly "out-doorish" the answer could be that the piece wasn't advertised as a society drama. And to its credit there is display of fine originality in many places and true-tempered pathos in others.

So much for the play. Of the company which presented it at Boyd's last night much more specific report can be made. The acting is good. S. Miller Kent, starting as "Teddy North," credit ranchman and under-rated hero, is equally pleasing as lover, defender and counsel in his own murder trial. Miss Elawren Harmon as Mrs. Weston, unhappy wife and crucified witness, acts capably and with real finesse. Mr. Benjamin Bradbury as Quick Foot Jim is fully adequate to the difficult task of impersonating an Indian author who kills persons without much compunction and repeats in beautiful language. Mr. Rapley Holmes, Mr. Joseph W. Magers and Mr. John T. Larkin are the kind of cowboys Mr. Clyde Fitch intended they should be. Mr. Charles Burbridge is an eminently righteous judge, and the women of the cast, without exception, are acceptable in their respective parts. The jury

General Agent for Illinois Central.

John R. Webster has been appointed general agent of the Illinois Central railroad in Omaha, effective February 1. According to his instructions, Mr. Webster is to report to the second vice-president, and he will be the direct representative of the general manager here. Mr. Webster will retain his position as general manager of the Omaha Bridge & Terminal company, now owned by the Illinois Central. The officials of this road stationed here, Assistant General Freight Agent Weitzel and Division Passenger Agent Brill, are in no way affected by this appointment, they remaining the representatives of the traffic department.

Doyle's Expensive Day in Omaha.

Lillian Moore will appear before Judge Berka this morning to answer to a charge of larceny from the person, the person in the case being Charles Doyle of Ogden, Neb., who accuses her of taking $20 from his pockets. Doyle says that she started out with $20 for a day with Lillian, and after visiting various wine rooms and a restaurant, he had only $2.00 balance on hand. To the police it seems hardly probable that Mr. Doyle could have done these things with an amount of only $2.00, and they believe that he has underestimated his expense account.

Did Not Steal Formulas.

J. M. Arnold of the Hall Remedy company says that Paul T. Hill and Dr. J. F. Davies are not accused of stealing any of the formulas of the Hall Remedy company. On the contrary, he specifically denies that the men had any of the formulas. They are merely accused of stealing the medicines and disposing of the same.
