(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, March 28 .- (Special.)-There is almost a rebellion in official circles in this county on account of the expense to the county of the operations of the new law for cure of the inebriates. The them worth double, county officials have found that because of this law the insane fund of the county is likely to be exhausted long before the middie of the fiscal year and the county will be running in debt to the state. The law 1.25 providing for the detention of inebriates at the state hospitals provides that they shall be treated as insone persons so far charge of all who are sent to the hospitals stripes, same goods sold for 50c. by the judges and the counties are made to pay for their support at the rate of $12 a month. It has been estimated that the total cost to Polk county alone from the care of the inebriates at the Mount Pleasant hospital will be about $15,000 a year. This has caused the officials to seek a way of escape. Efforts have been made to secure the return of many of the inebriates simply on the, ground of saving expense, and as the superintendent will not recommend paroles, the courts are trying to secure the return of men by reopening the cases and giving a new hearing with the purpose of allowing the persons to remain at home. The members of the Board of Supervisors also threaten to refuse to pay the bills for the inebriates and thus leave the state without this support. The situation is one unlooked for and for which the county is not prepared. A similar state of affairs exists in a number of other counties

Looks Like a Suicide.

The police of Des Moines are trying to unravel what is supposed to be a suicide mystery. George Reed left a note to his wife that he intended to jump into the river and drown himself The police think it is a bluff, but they are looking into the matter anyhow, to satisfy relatives and friends. This morning George Barkheimer found a package of letters and photos on the East Ninth street bridge. In them was a note from George Reed to his wife, telling her she would never see him again, as the river would be his resting place, or words to that effect. Detective Yeager and others have been searching the river, also inquiring in the country to the south and east, without securing any evidence of suicide. He leaves wife and family in Southeast Des Moines, Cummins on Lake Bed Cases.
