DEACON HICKERSON'S SOLACE

After Being Sore-Distressed and Heavy of Heart He Finds Relief.

PRISON WALLS TO FALL FROM ABOUT HIM

Experience of a Good Man Among the Evil Ones of a Great City and His Unhappy and Perplexing Results.

made, who came and signed a great paper and the woman went her way rejoicing. And as she passed out she scorned the deacon with three loud ha-ha's and bade him wait her return in cheerfulness.

Now the deacon was afar from them that knew him and without friends. He was sick and in prison, but they visited him not. Nor came to sign the bond that he might be released, and until this day he hath languished on a wall that shall fall from about him and he shall have freedom to go home and square himself.

But a good Samaritan finally told the deacon of the purpose of postage stamps, and he hath written all over Iowa and to his wife telling her how it did not happen. And now there hath come a letter from a Glenwood bank and the bank writeth that the deacon is a goodly man and that therefore it will go his bond. And the county attorney hath seen and heard and believed, and a great light is breaking in upon the deacon's soul and he is singing in a loud voice. For there hath come the time when the prison walls shall fall from about him and he shall have freedom to go home and square himself.

Off for Big Horn Basin.

C. F. Robertson leaves this evening over the Burlington for a month's stay in the Big Horn Basin country, where he goes in the interests of the Big Horn Co-operative Oil company, of which he is secretary, and Hanover Canal company, of which he is secretary and general manager. He says that both companies will begin active operations in the near future. The Oil company has its drilling machinery on the ground ready to sink a well. The Hanover Canal company will irrigate about 25,000 acres of fine agricultural land in the valley of the Big Horn river.
