modated on the battleship St. Louis. Much political significance is attached to the journey, as it is the first time that any president of the French republic has visited Africa, and it will be the first meeting on African soil between a French ruler and a northern African sultan and the bey of Tunis.

While the international attention shown to President Loubet by the assemblage of a powerful foreign squadron in Algerian Yung Lu and conferring on him posthuwaters to salute him on his arrival is not without significance, the fact that the bey Li Hung Chang. of Tunis will go to receive the president on his landing, an honor that that potentate has never before paid a royal visitor, already has made a powerful impression on the Tunisians, who consider this a complete acknowledgment of French sovereignty.
