On motion of the county attorney the cases against Alonzo V. Miller, Theodore Schroeder and J. L. Kubat, members of the South Omaha school board charged with bribery, were nolled.

County Attorney English states that he nolled the bribery cases because he did not believe that there was sufficient evidence to warrant proceeding with the trials and incurring additional expense for the county after the strongest case, that against Miller, had already been tried and lost under the Shields administration. County Attorney Shields said at the time that the Miller case was the strongest.

WOMAN IN CLUB AND CHARITY

A matter that has been smeldering for the last year was at last brought before the members of the Woman's club, at yesterday afternoon's meeting after a heated iscussion in the directory, and while time did not admit of an adjustment of it, there was sufficient discussion to show that it is no indifferent matter to those who have to do with the management of things. It was the complimentary or free membership list; a privilege that has existed during the last year, but of which the majority of members heard for the first time yesterday afternoon. The subject was introduced by the president, Mrs. Cole, who asked Mrs. Tilden to explain it, which she did, stating that the privilege had originated with the directory last year after the adjournment of the club, and while Mrs. W. W. Keysor was still president. Its object is to show recognition of several organizations of the city whose heads are not members and whose duties do not admit of their regular attendance at meetings. She mentioned the Young Women's Christian association, the City Mission association and Child Saving Institute, Mrs. Byers, secretary of the first named, and Miss Magee, city missionaries being two who have enjoyed the privileges this year. The list is limited to five and applications have to have three signers, the names being presented to the membership committee just as others are.

At the close of this explanation, Mrs. Rosewater, chairman of the membership committee, said that there was more to be said of this privilege, explaining that there resolutions to report during the meeting, had been for several years a fund of which submitted the following report, which was bership of deserving women who are unable to pay their own and that this com-Whereas, It is for the best interest of the city of Omaha that an honest, fearliess and patriotic citizen of Omaha be elected to the office of mayor of said city, and whereas this club recognizes that in the person of Frank E. To bring the matter before the house Mrs. Andrews offered a motion to continue the complimentary list, but to confine it to women who will be of benefit to the club, and who possess literary or other tastes that may be benefited by the privileges. General approval was evident, but before any further discussion could follow, a motion was made to postpone the matter for two weeks and as the time was short and there were guests to be heard from, the matter was laid over for two weeks.

Boy previous to the row, sat for a shave in the barber shop of Brown, but to another barber. At the end of the operation, he called the attention of the artist to a lock of hair which he said Brown had falled to cut when clipping his hair several days before. The barber cut the lock and Boy stepped outside. The barber told Brown of the incident and the latter, hot with offended professional pride, called the customer back to the shop. Boy says that the barber flourished a revolver, whereupon he (Box) smashed him over the head with a bottle of hair tonic, breaking the bottle and raising a growth of cuts and bruises which were afterwards stitched. COMMITTEE TO APPORTION THE FUNDS

When This is Done the Board May Proceed with Business Under the New law-Magie City Gossip.

Five members of the Board of Education met last night and were prepared to attend to routine business, but James Roach, a deputy sheriff, was on hand with a restraining order. This order was issued by Judge Dickinson and prohibited the members of the board from employing teachers, janitors, etc. The cause is set for hearing on May 2. While there was no intention of the members in attendance to elect teachers last night Laverty thought that there was and so he went before the court and secured the restraining order. Saturday night the board will meet in adjourned session to allow teachers' salaries for the month of April.

Miller, composed of Lott, Kubat and Schroeder, to wait upon Treasurer E. L. Howe, to ascertain the amount of the deficit in the school fund and make apportionment for the different funds. At the conference of the committee an estimate will be made of the amount needed to carry on the schools for the fiscal year. When this is done, it is asserted, the new laws will be carried out and the present board may proceed to business. Laverty is trying to prevent a business neeting of the board before May 4, when Miller, Lott and Schroeder retire. After that time the board will consist of six members. There is no question as to the injury to the nervous system produced by smoking, and this injury is of course, greatest on persons of fine organizations, but outside of that the fact that a woman is tompted to smoke is evidence enough of her essential coarseness of nature, and those of us who admire fine and noble women are simply satisfied to pass her by on the other side.

The average man, even though a smoker himself, has this view of the case, whether he expresses it or not. Surely nothing is more repulsive to the majority of men than the breath of a woman tainted with nicotine or alcohol. Very truly yours, DAVID S. JORDAN.

Abraham Lincoln's Due.

I have spoken at the outset this evening, of the homage we should pay to the memory of Grant. It is the homage we should pay to the memory of Lincoln, the homage we should pay to the memory of Lincoln, the homage we should pay to all of our fellow countrymen who have at any time rendered great service to the republic, and it can be rendered in most efficient form not by merely praising them for having dealt with problems which now we do not have to face, but by facing our problems in the same spirit in which they faced theirs. Nothing was more noteworthy in all of Lincoln's character than the way in which he combined fealty to the loftiest ideal with a thoroughly practical capacity to achieve that ideal by practical methods. He did not war with phantoms; he did not struggle among the clouds; he faced facts; he en-

STERLESS.

Our complex industrial civilization has not only been productive of much benefit, but has also brought us face to face with many puzzling problems, problems that are puzzling partly because there are men that are wicked, partly because there are good men who are foolish or short-sighted. There are many such today—the problems of labor and capital, the problems which we group together rather vaguely when we speak of the problems of the trusts, the problems affecting the farmers on the one hand, the railroads on the other. It would not be possible in any one place to deal with the particular shapes which these problems take at that time and in that place. And yet there are certain general rules which can be laid down for dealing with all of them, and those rules are the immutable rules of justice, of sanity, of courage, of common sense. Six months ago it fell to my lot to appoint a commission to investigate into and conclude about matters connected with the great and menacing strike in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania. On that commission I appointed representatives of the church, of the benned of the army, representative of the capitalists of the region and a representative of organized labor. They published a report which was not only of the utmost moment because of dealing with the great and vital problem with which they were appointed to deal, but also in its conclusions initiating certain general rules in so clear and masterful a fashion that I wish most earnestly certain general rules in so clear and mas-terful a fashion that I wish most earnestly it could receive the broadest circulation as tract wherever there exists or threatens exist trouble in any way akin to that ith which those commissioners dealt.

For Right and Justice.

If I might give a word of advice to comman, I should like to see your daily preispublish in full the concluding portion of that report of the anthracite coal striktommission, signed by all the membratement, by those in a special sense the champion of the wageworker and by those in a special sense the champion of the wageworker and by those in a special sense identified with capital, organized and unorganized, because, men and women of Omaha, those people did not speak first as tagitalist or as laborer, di not speak first as judge, as army men, as churchmen, but they spoke, all of them unanimously signed that report, all of them unanimously signed that report, all of them as American citizens, anxous to seright and justice prevail. (Cheers and applause.) No one quality will get us out o any difficulty. We need more than one, we need a good many. We need as I said, the power first of carh man's honestly trying to look at the pralem from his fellow's standpoint. Capitalist and wageworker alike should hones. I said the power first of capitalist and wageworker alike should hones. I said the standpoint, with a freedom in the other's standpoint, with a freedom in the one hand from the contemptible arrogance which looks down upon the man of less means, and on the other from the no less contemptible envy, fealousy and rancowhich hates another because he is let e off. (Applause.) Each quality is the complement of the other, and in point of baseness there is not the weight of the finger to choose between them. Look at the report signed by those men; look at it in the spirit in which they wrote it, and if you can only make yourselves, make the community, approach the problems of today in the spirit that those men; sook at it in the spirit in which they wrote it, and if you can only make yourselves, make the community, approach the problems of today in the spirit that those men. your fell For Right and Justice.

Danger in Demagogy.

I cannot too often say that the wisest law, the best administration of the law, can do naught more than give us a fair field in which to work out that fate aright. If in which to work out that fate aright. If as individuals or as a community we mar our future by our own folly, let us remember that it is upon ourselves that the resonability must rest.

Any man who tries to excite class hate, sectional hate, hate of creeds, any kind of hatred in our community, though he may affect to do it in the interest of the class he is addressing, is in the long run with absolute certainty that class' own worst enemy. (Applause.) In the long run and as a whole we are going to go up or go enemy. (Applause.) In the long run and as a whole we are going to go up or go down together. Of course, there will be individual exceptions, small, local exceptions, exceptions in kind, exceptions in place, but as a whole if the commonwealth prospers some measure of the prosperly comes to all of us. If it is not prosperly, then the adversity, though it may be unequally upon us, will weigh more or less upon all. It lies upon ourselves to determine our own fate.

His Message to Omaha.

fellow citizens, men and women

His Message to Omaha.

My fellow citizens, men and women of Omaha, let me close in expressing the abounding confidence i have that you of this city, that you of this state, will in the end work out your fate aright, because I hold you to be in a peculiar sense typical of all that is best in the American character. I believe in you with all my heart. I believe that you are strong a body and strong in mind, and that you have what counts for more than body, more than mind—character; character, into which so many elements enter, but three above all. In the first place, honesty—and I use the word in its widest sense; honesty, decency, the spirit that makes a man a good husband, a good father, a good neighbor, and square in his dealings not only with his brother but with the state—in the first place, honesty—and honesty is not enough. I do not care how honest a man is, if he is timid or a weaking you can do but little with him. An honest man who is afraid is of scant use in the community. Honesty, and in addition thereto, courage, hardihood, maniliness, the qualities that make a man fit to go out and do battle in the rough world as it actually is. Applause.) Virtue—you have got to have that. The able, fearless, unscrupulous man who is not guided by the moral law is a curse to be hunted down like the wild beast, and his ability and his courage, whether in business, in politics or anywhere else, only serve to make him more dangerous and a greater curse. But virture of a purely cloistered type, the virtue that sits at home in its own parior, dues not count. (Applause.) You have got to have the qualities, the virtue that sits at home in its own parior, dues not count. (Applause.) You have got to have the qualities, the virtue that sits a man. And courage even joined to honesty is not enough. I do not care how brave a man is, how honest he is, if he is a fool you can do but little with him. We must have courage, we must have honesty, hut with them both, and guiding them both, we must have course, we must have honesty, hut

so much; that you have in you the quality of good citizenship, the quality that produces that, compared to which all else is of naught, good men and good women. (Great applause.) the business capacity that has built

When he could not get the best he was forced to content himself, and did content himself with the best possible. And what he did in his day we must do in ours. It is not possible to lay down any rule of conduct so specific that it will enable us to meet each particular issue as it arises. All that can be done is to lay down certain general rules and then to try, each man for himself, to apply those general rules to the specific cases that come up. A little red, a little white, delicately blended. That's one way. Here's a better:

Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It makes the blood pure and rich. You know the rest: red cheeks, steady nerves, good digestion, restful sleep, power to endure. Keep the bowels regular with Ayer's Pills; this will greatly aid the Sarsaparilla. Two grand family medicines. Keep them on hand. J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.
