Des Moines All Turns Out. DES MOINES, Ia., April 28 .- (Special.) -Every foot of available room, in and around the depot was occupied by people this afternoon when the train bearing President Roosevelt arrived in the city. It was with the utmost difficulty that the police and militia were enabled to keep the people back so that the movements of the presidential party would not be hampered. Each and every individual in the throng appeared to be making the effort to cheer ouder and longer than his neighbor, and greatest of actors; all stage history is fragrant with the memories of how this man or that played Brutus, and of the Antonies and Cassiuses there are legends reaching back almost to the time of the author. And competent critics insist that Mr. Mansfield has in a large measure disregarded all these traditions, has overturned the fixed conventionalities of the piece, and has given us a Brutus of his own making. He has been ompared with this Brutus and with that, all to the purpose of showing that he has or has not produced a character that is entitled to stand. And as individuals differ on almost everything else, so they differ on the Mansfield Brutus, All will admit, and without argument, that Mr. Mansfield has given the part deep study, and invests it with a dignity and a pathos that is at least satisfying if it does not realize all that mediately expelled from the territory of the republic.

Article 10—The presidents of the states, the governor of the federal district and the governors of the federal territories upon becoming aware that any one or more of the domiciled foreigners residing in their respective jurisdictions intermeddle in the political affairs of the republic they shall bring a proper legal action through the ordinary tribunals, transmitting the proceedings in the cases to the federal executive in compilance with the decree to be passed in conformity with the disposition contained in article 7.

Article 11—Neither domiciled foreigners nor those in transit have any right to respect to the diplomatic road, except when, having exhausted all legal means, before the competent authorities, it clearly appears that there has been a denial of juspears that there has been a denial of juspears of his course. In his speech in one thinks might become the embodiment rectness of his course. In his speech in the forum he rises to his real attitude, and justifies himself and his co-conspirators. Here is given a splendid glimpse of what Brutus probably was. Mr. Mansfield no doubt waits for this moment, and the weakness apparent in the earlier action lays an excellent foundation for the strength here general manager of the Union Iron works, shown. It is the honest patriot who is died this afternoon at his home in this speaking, and the noble dignity and mod- tyty. He had been in poor health for some esty of his demeanor and the simple directness of his language disarm the mob and quite exculpate the ten who stabbed is overwhelmed by the news of the sudden so much. In the conduct of Cassius he sees ready to answer for his deeds.

Mr. Frederick Paulding, who is well known here as a star of other days, is the Caius Cassius, and his presentation of the part of that crafty schemer is most satisfying. Mr. Paulding still retains his wonderful faculties as a "reader" of Shakespeare's poetry, and it is a delight beyond question to listen to his enunciation of the eloquent passages that fall to his lot.

actor, has the part of Marcus Antonius, and does it well. His delivery of the speech over the body of Caesar in the forum, a masterplece of demagogy, was done last night with such excellent taste and effect as to win for him a most enthusiastic curtain call. In all respects the supporting company is good, and the piece is staged with a magnificence and such attention to detail as to leave nothing to be desired. In a measure this is a disadvantage, for the delay incident to the handling of the heavy scenery last night caused the play to run nearly an hour longer than it should ordinarily. "Julius Caesar" will be repeated again this evening.

The audience last night was of the kind that always greets Mr. Mansfield here, and to say that the beauties of the play and its presentation were enjoyed would be to state fact very mildly. While there were no wild outbursts of enthusiasm, the audience was at all times generous in its expression of appreciation and delight. A list of the notables present would include well nigh the entire local roster. Those who sat in the boxes were:

WASHINGTON: April 28. - Colonel Mills of the inspector general's department, who went to Denver to investigate the interview, said to have been given by General Baldwin regarding Fillpino and negro soldiers, has reported to Secretary Root that the interview never took place and that the man who reported It had been discharged from his paper. It appears that Baldwin did have an interview when he first arrived at Denver. and it was this interview to which he referred when he subsequently said he was misunderstood if he was interpreted as saying anything reflecting upon the Filtpino or colored soldiers.

Colonel Mills' report is supported by a great many affidavits and much testimony which has been presented to the secretary.

French Parcels Post Assured. Postmaster General Payne said today he felt hopeful that a parcels post treaty with France would be in operation by July 1. The negotiations with other governments are not so far advanced. None of the treaties to be made will allow a maximum weight of more than four pounds, although the treaty now in force with Germany allows twelve pounds. This, however, will be reduced on July 1.

CONSUMPTION

April 8, 1962.

I was afflicted with all the symptoms of first and second stages of consumption with homorphage of the lungs. Dectors advised me to go to New Mexico-dry climate-but instead I took the Efter Hoff Cure and consider myself a well man today. I wish you would send me a few copies of "TREATIRE ON CONSUMPTION." I would distribute them among my friends, as I have done with those I received with my medicine. My faith is great in this medicine. If known to me two years ago, my wife would have been living today to bless my home. You may use my name.

weekly crop report:

Nearly the whole country east of the Rocky mountains experienced unseasonably low temperatures during the week ending April 27, and while the rainfall in the central valleys has been light, considerable areas receiving no appreciable amount, farm work has made very slow progress owing to the soil and low temperature.

As in the previous week corn planting has made slow progress, more particularly over the central and eastern portions of the corn belt, but better progress has been made in Kansas and Nebraska and preparations for planting have been vigorously carried on in Iowa and portions of Illinois.

While the condition of winter wheat continues very promising a slight deterioriation is indicated over the central and eastern portions of the wheat belt as a result of the excessive moisture and low temperatures. Bust and insects have appeared in some counties in southern Missouri and Nebraska and portions of Kansas the crop would be benefited by rain.

Spring wheat seeding is well advanced over the northern portion of the spring wheat region, and under favorable conditions will be practically completed in the central portions during the week. Satisfactory germination and good stands are reported from South Dakota and Iowa.

In Missouri and central Mississippi valleys out seeding has been well advanced, but in the Ohio valley much seeding remains to be done. In Texas the crop is much in need of rain. Again Mr. Mansfield comes to Omaha close a brilliant season at the Boyd theaence that well represents not alone the wealth and fashion, but the culture and intelligence of the community. Whether Mr. Mansfield is in danger of forming a habit of annually ringing down the curtain on the theatrical year in Omaha may be left undebated; it is certain that he will be welcomed whenever he comes, and as often. His present visit shows him to us in still a new part, and uncovers even additional riches among his established talents as an actor. His welcome was as warm as any he ever had, and no one will undertake to say it was not merited. It was a very daring thing, even for Mansfield, to revive a classic play, and then depart so apparently from the traditions which have surrounded it until they have become all but sacred to the piece. But he has done it,

Here Mr. Mansfield ceases to be the studious philosopher and for the moment becomes the man. After his energetic scene with Cassius it is a neat touch, and shows again the thoughful consideration of British for those about him—the in the quarrel he speaks his mind so freely tion of Brutus for those about him-the real key to his character-that leads him to take off his cloak and cover the crouching form of his sleeping servant. His vision of Caesar and his promise to meet him at Phillippi is done not with the desperation of a man who opposes the end, but with the resignation of one who is weary and is Altogether Mr. Mansfield's Brutus, while it may not be classed with that of Booth, who is best remembered here, is certain to be listed among the scholarly and intelligent undertakings, and one that is in all ways to the credit of the hardworking ar-
