

WORKING MAN IN POLITICS

Labor and the Laborers the Bulwark of American Independence.

COERCION OF WORKERS GREAT MENACE

Edward Rosewater's Address to Voters of Seventh Ward on Rights and Duties of the Laboring Man in Politics.

Following is the full text of the speech of Edward Rosewater, delivered in the seventh ward Friday evening...

Fellow Citizens: I might say fellow workmen, for I spring from the ranks of labor and have been a bread winner nearly all my life...

Tonight I propose to talk to you about the political rights and duties of the working man. I want to impress upon you the fact that the most precious asset of the American working man is his elective franchise...

No War on Corporations. Now I do not decry corporations as such. I would not counsel or countenance warfare upon them except when they levy unrighteous tribute upon the people...

The wage workers of America who labor for a living in the shops, in the mills, in the factories, in the warehouses and office buildings are the bulwark of America's free institutions...

Some Omaha History. Now let me relate to you a story of a campaign in the city of Omaha thirty years ago. Back in 1873 every office in the city hall and court house was filled by democrats...

OMAHA, Oct. 1873. To S. H. H. Clark, General Superintendent Union Pacific Railroad, North Platte, Neb.—Please instruct Union Pacific shompen to cast their votes for the democratic candidates for sheriff and treasurer.

Now, while I do not wish to decry or berate Mr. Howell, who lives in this ward, and have nothing to say against him personally, we do know that as a public attorney for the Union Pacific and the message was very suggestive. I asked the operators whether that message really had passed over the wires and they said yes. I then asked them to bring me the original message, if possible...

Under ordinary conditions it might not have been proper for me to make use of a dispatch surreptitiously carried away from the telegraph office, but inasmuch as this dispatch was virtually an attempt to destroy free government...

At that time we had an Australian ballot. Every voter had to bring separate ballot and deposit it in the ballot box or hand it to the judge of election, and it was very easy for anybody who was a spotter to see just how any man voted...

There were ten girls, four boys and one boy in the factory when the explosion occurred. The flames were easily subdued after the explosion, as there was nothing left of the factory but a pile of rubble...

A short distance from the factory Harry Gleschen was a 15-year-old boy who was lying critically ill of typhoid fever. The explosion and the consequent shock was too great for him to bear...

The other day a gentleman who represented Nebraska in the United States senate and a few other snobs affected to think that the mayor of Omaha was not the kind of a man to sit in a carriage with the president of the United States...

The fact that these corporations and jobbers are combining together to down the present administration of this city is the most conclusive proof that the freedom of the city is in danger...

Now, while I do not wish to decry or berate Mr. Howell, who lives in this ward, and have nothing to say against him personally, we do know that as a public

The explosion was caused by a peculiar fire. The torpedo caps are filled in molds and the loose powder fills on the floor. During the lunch hour one of the new girls playfully shoved another. She slid along the floor her shoes striking a spark in some loose powder...

With great presence of mind one of the girls lifted a tub of water and threw it on the fire. The blaze had gained too great headway, however, and the water did not quench it. The girls did not seem to realize their great danger...
