Morocco Not an Imposing Speciacle.

In the morning, at 4 o'clock, the bugle sounded to break camp; the foot soldlers arose, pulled up their tent pegs, and were away in the darkness. Gradually the remaining tents came down, and the throng of Araba were on the move. The sultan's tent remained. Prestained a similar camp last year and found ently five gorgeously saddled horses were brought before their royal master, who with a motion of his hand, chose one, the others being taken away, while he rose with great solemnity, and, mounting, rode to all sides of the square, to be thrice saluted by each body of soldiers. This ceremony completed, the musicians, armed with oboes and tom-toms, disturbed the atmosphere with a doleful, prehistoric dirge, and the procession was under way. It was nothing but an entanglement of artillery, infantry, flags, horsemen and court officials in a mad riot, but, as in a threshing machine tearing its insides furiously, the wheat straw and chaff found their channels at once, and left the ignorant beholder spellbound. Behold! they were moving with military precision, a brother of the sultan at the head, followed by an extremely wide row of mounted soldiers carrying silken standards of all colors. Then came the artillery, rattling and imping, and coming to grief often where the roads were bad. Next followed mounted soldiers and a score of government officials, a sort of police. After a short space, riding alone, came a kaid of the mishwa (master ceremonies), very straight and very black, picturesquely hugging his gun close

After him came four led horses abreast all richly saddled, for the sultan's use should he tire of his mount. Then, with some distance intervening, came the sultan alone, save for six black slaves, who kept up a continual wafting of white cloths in the direction of his face.

A palanquin containing the blue chair then appeared, carried between two mules, just in front of another row of mounted standard bearers, followed by the minister of war and the important members of the urt. All were obliged to turn aside and make way for this cavalcade.-Century Maguzine.
