STILL THE SAME HUMPHREY

Old Warrior Has Aged Little, Though Considerably Bronzed.

REMINISCENCES OF LONG CAREER

New Quartermaster General Who Assumes His Duties at Washington Tomorrow Has Seen Much Foreign and Frontier Service.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(Special Telegram.)—General Charles F. Humphrey, the new quartermaster general of the army, appeared among his old-time associates of the army and newspaper corps of Washington today ready to assume his duties on Monday under general orders.

Humphrey is hardly a day older, so far as it looks go, than when he served as acting quartermaster in the old Department of the Platte. He is considerably bronzed, but he has seen much service in the Orient, but he is still the same Humphrey to the boys he knew at West Point and during the Sioux campaign.

General Humphrey enlisted at Buffalo during the outbreak of the civil war and served throughout that conflict with distinction. At the reorganization of the army in 1866 he was appointed second lieutenant of the Fifth Cavalry, and for nearly a quarter of a century has been an officer of the regular army.

General Humphrey saw plenty of service on the frontier and since his elevation to the staff as quartermaster general in 1878 he has been regarded as one of the chief quartermasters in Cuba during the Spanish-American war and upon his own request was assigned to China at the outbreak of the Boxer trouble.

Since the American troops were withdrawn from China he has been stationed at Honolulu, and will now, when he comes to Washington to occupy the highest position in the quartermaster's department in the army. No officer in the military establishment of the United States has seen so much foreign service as Charles F. Humphrey, and his promotion is due entirely to his record.

WOMAN IN CLUB AND CHARITY

The recently issued order of Secretary Blaw to Commissioner Williams of the port of New York to discontinue the service of women as inspectors of immigration has called forth a protest from women all over the country, and now the demand is beginning to come that an official report of these discharged women inspectors be published.

Commissioner Williams has been at all times most liberally opposed to women inspectors and at a meeting called in their interest a short time ago, at which some of the representative women of New York were present, he announced that all the protection needed by girls coming to this country could be rendered by men; that it was not the work of the government to look after young women arriving here without friends, and that he should continue to advise the president to remove the women inspectors.

On the other hand, these objectionable inspectors are all women of more than the average education and ability, and the reports they have made to various interested organizations indicate that the real reason for their being so objectionable is that they see and learn too much. It is asserted that Commissioner Williams has more than once expressed his opinion with just objection. Repeatedly the women have reported rescuing young girls, many of them unable to speak a word of English, from men who had arranged to take them to places of ill repute.

While it has been voted by the various organizations supporting the classes at Tenth Street mission to close the classes for the summer, the work refuses to be closed and Miss Magee finds her time almost as much occupied as during the winter months in the summer. The schedule of the winter has been abandoned, the night meetings closed entirely, and the big room converted into a reading room for the summer. A big table has been supplied with books and magazines that are very attractive to the older children and grown people.

The little people are not so easily disposed of, but have insisted upon coming about the building until Miss Magee, with the assistance of some of the regulars, has been compelled to devise some plan for taking care of them. The girls have been divided into ten, Mrs. Charles Williams taking one class in instrumental music; Mrs. Alquist has a class in quilt making; the doctor's brother, W. E. Andrews, and Miss Magee has in charge; Mrs. MacMurphy conducts a class in cooking, and there are still two classes in sewing and music without teachers.

In the meantime the boys have been busy making gardens at that far corner of the winter, has been compelled to devise some plan for taking care of them.
