There has been but little rain and the fields have dried up until work has been resumed, and though the nights have been very cool everything is reported as growing nicely. The hay crop will be one of the largest ever known, oats are doing nicely and much of the corn that was at first thought to be ruined is resuming the proper color and will produce a good crop. Small fruits will be a heavier yield than was at first expected and save for a very few fields on the low grounds the crop outlook is fine. Nearly all the plowing is completed and many of the farmers are planting with six-week corn in hopes that it will mature before frost, as the season
