VERDICT GUILTY FOR MORRIS Soldier Murderer is Convicted of Manslaughter by the Jury.

SENTENCE UPON PRISONER IS DEFERRED

Juryman Have to Have Additional Instructions Before Agreeing on What Return They Should Make to the Court.

The jury in the Morris murder case came in yesterday with a verdict of manslaughter as charged in the indictment.

The verdict involves a maximum sentence of ten years. Sentence will probably be pronounced by Judge McPherson Friday, when the Linn case is taken up.

The jury arrived at its verdict in the case about 8:30 Tuesday night. The case was given to the jury shortly after 3 o'clock Tuesday and several ballots were taken prior to 6:30 o'clock, when the jury went to supper and were directed to return to the federal court room at 7:30.

McPherson was waiting at the court room for them and the jury filed down from the jury room to the court room with the announcement that they could not agree. The question at issue was the length of punishment that would be inflicted on the defendant under certain verdicts. The jury then returned to the jury room under instructions by Judge McPherson to arrive at a verdict if they could, after a ballot or two, and then go to their hotel in charge of the bailiff for the night and report find a verdict to the court at 8:30 in the morning. The verdict was reached at 8:30 Tuesday night.

The accused, Edward Morris of the Twenty-fifth United States infantry, was in the court room when the verdict was announced. He seemed somewhat surprised, as it was evident that he was confident of acquittal. The delay in pronouncing sentence is to give the attorneys for the defense an opportunity to file a motion for a new trial. It is hardly possible that this will be done, as the fact that Morris killed his comrade, Henry McKee, at Fort Niobrara on the evening of September 11, 1902, is admitted by the prisoner, but only his unsupported evidence shows the killing was an accident, while several witnesses testified to the fact of unprovoked murder.

CIGAR MEN PUSH ORDINANCE Organized Effort Among Them to Regulate All Slot Machines.

About seventy-five retail cigar dealers are behind the slot machine ordinance introduced in the council Tuesday night by Mr. O'Brien. So far as known there is no opposition to the ordinance among the cigar men and its promoters therefore expect it to be passed next week.

"Some time ago," said one of the cigar dealers, "all of the best men in the trade realized that the operation of slot machines with each price and checks that might be played back into the machines was a great injury to the business. A good many young men would play several dollars into a machine without getting even a cigar for their trouble, and of course some of them would get sore and walk out without making a purchase. So, you see, we have something of a selfish interest in trying to put a stop to the check machines, but it is selfish merely so far as it protects our customers against losses which some of them are unwilling to bear."

"The worst feature of the machines, however, is the cash play, which is gambling pure and simple. Upon investigation we ascertained that the cash paying machines were patronized as much by boys as by men. Some boys would lose their wages and then a complaint would be made by their parents. We had no trouble in inducing practically all of the reputable cigar dealers to discontinue the payment of cash and checks, but some of the less scrupulous dealers persisted in the business.

"Accordingly we organized several weeks ago, with about seventy-five members, and decided to put a stop to cash and check machines in every store in Omaha. The only way to do this was to get an ordinance enacted under which the offending ones may be prosecuted and fined. After the ordinance passes our association will keep close watch on all stores and vigorously prosecute anybody found violating its provisions."

LOSES LEG TO SAVE DUCKS

Serious Accident Happens to Woman in Belt Line Yards.

MRS. COATS RUN DOWN BY SWITCH ENGINE

Was Endeavoring to Drive Fowls Out of Danger When Struck and Crushed by the Passing Locomotive.

In attempting to drive some ducks from the railroad tracks to prevent them from being run over by a switch engine Mrs. J. P. Coats of Fourteenth and Burdette streets was herself struck by the engine and severely and dangerously wounded.

The wheels passed over her right leg below the knee, and her foot, necessitating amputation; fractured her left elbow and produced a bad laceration on her arm and injured her internally.

Mrs. Coats was at once taken to her home by the train crew and her husband and later removed to St. Joseph hospital, where Dr. Bishop and Dr. Ramsey, the railroad surgeons, amputated the injured leg just below the knee. At noon the injured woman was suffering severely from the shock, and, owing to her advanced age, her injuries are considered serious. Dr. Bishop says that unless the internal injuries are worse than at first supposed she will recover.

Mr. and Mrs. Coats conduct a small duck farm near where the accident occurred and it was to save her ducks that she was injured. A switch engine on the Belt line was at work near where the ducks were feeding. Mrs. Coats and her husband went out to drive the ducks from the tracks. Mrs. Coats rushed onto the tracks as the engine was heading in sight, but apparently did not notice how close it was upon her. The engine crew called to her and attempted to stop, but too late.

Without a Claim Agent. The city of Omaha is without a claim agent since the council unceremoniously attached a rope to George C. Cocker's job Tuesday night and pulled it out from under him. Mr. Cocker was at the city hall yesterday, but denied he was on duty. "I am out," said he, "and that is all there is to it. There is no claim agent now, and what is to become of the dozens of cases that ought to be looked up is a problem for somebody to solve. Perhaps the council will create the position again—when the majority of the members can arrange to have their own man appointed to fill it."

For an Official Paper. City Clerk Elsbourn will advertise Thursday for bids on the city printing for the year beginning July 1. At the last session of the legislature the city charter was amended to provide for the publication of the official notices in one English daily newspaper to be selected by the council after competitive bids had been invited. Until the charter amendment went into effect the city had two official newspapers, the notices being printed at a flat rate designated in the law.
