HERE TO DISCUSS SCHOOLS

Superintendents and Principals from Various Sections Meet in Omaha.

OVER FIFTY PRESENT AT FIRST SESSION

State Superintendent Stetson of Maine Pays High Compliment to School Workers of the West and Their Originality.

"It has attracted a great deal of attention in the east, and more than one paper has asked why some bright eastern man did not ever think of such a school," said State Superintendent W. W. Stetson of Maine in speaking of the Transmississippi Summer School of Superintendence, the first session of which was held at it o'clock yesterday morning in the Board of Education assembly room, city hall.

Over fifty city and county superintendents and principals, from Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and other states were present, and it is expected that 150 more will arrive within the next two days. Superintendent Pearse called the school to order, stating that in doing so he was reminded of the acorn and oak story, and hoped the school would carry it out. It had been suggested several years ago that such a school be held and the holding of it was the result of much planning. The members were present primarily to receive instruction, but not in silence-they would be expected to "talk back," discuss or, if they so desired, dispute.

Superintendent J. M. Greenwood of the Kansas City, Mo., schools told of the great work accomplished during the past few years by summer schools of various kinds. The great variety of subjects treated by them was well known, and their influence on the schools of the country were becoming plainly visible. But this was the first school in this or any other country especially for school superintendents and principals, and dealing solely with matters pertaining to their work. It was to be a practical and not a theoretical school, and would help, he was confident, in the great work in which all schools are engagedthe making of good citizens out of the children of the country.

Compares East and West.

Superintendent Stetson spoke entertainingly for a few minutes on conditions down in the "state of Maine," and said he had more than once found it necessary and advisable to call attention there to the fact that the state-Nebraska-having the smallest percentage of illiteracy, was west of the Missouri river.

Superintendent Greenwood started the real work of the school with a lecture on the relations of the school superintendent to the educational authorities of the state and nation and to his own board of educa-

For the next four days the program provides for lectures by Superintendents Greenwood and Stetson every morning and round table discussions every afternoon, conducted by State Superintendents Olsen of Minnesota, Dayhoff of Kansas, Carrington of Missouri and Barrett of Iowa. # TOO MANY REPUBLICAN PEGS

One Reason Why Scheme for Nonpartisan Judicial Election May Fail.

DEMOCRATS ARE IN RECEPTIVE MOOD

Minority Party is Willing to Take One or Two or Three Places on Judiciary Ticket and Be Satisfied.

I am in favor of a nonpartisan judiciary provided all the judges are republicans— Chairman H. H. Baldrige of the repulican pudicial committee.

In making this statement Mr. Baldrige expressed the sentiment of perhaps the majority of the republican members of the Omaha Bar association, but with the democratic members the proposition for a nonpartisan judiciary is very differently received. Realizing the improbability of electing even one of the seven judges in a partisan contest, the democrats are of course ready to take on any scheme that making five or six nominations. Democratic Barkis is Willing.

The democrats are apparently quite willing to take one or two or three places on the bench and then quit with a satisfied Ed. P. Smith, chairman of the democratic judicial committee says: "There is no hurry about calling the democratic judicial convention, and the committee may not meet for some weeks yet. I have satisfied with two or three places on the ticket. Conditions ought to be such that judges would not have to get down to ward politics to get or to save their jobs. The less politics we can have in the selection of our judges the better it will be for the bar and the citizens generally." Although there are no avowed candidates for places on a democratic judicial ticket the following lawyers of that political faith have been suggested; E. C. Page, Arthur Wakeley, Lysle I. Abbott, R. S. Horton, George W. Cooper, B. N. Roberton and George W. Doane.

In the meanwhile all the aspirants for nominations in the republican fold are going right along in their canvass for republican support as if the republican nomination were the only one than counts. The new town of Lidderdate, Carroll
